AIR RAIDERS STRIKE IN NEW FURY AT LONDON AND BERLIN

SAYS GERMANS PREPARED FOR ISLE INVASION

Churchill Warns Britain of Anticipated Drive By Nazis Within Week.

STILL 'CONFIDENT'

Asserts Hitler's Attempt To Gain Daylight Mastery of Air Fails.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Nazi Germany may attempt an invasion of the British Isles within the next week, Prime Minister Winston Churchill warned the nation tonight.

In a broadcast speech delivered soon after the third air raid on London of the day had ended Churchill expressed confidence that the people of Britain would prove themselves equal to the test, but called on every man and woman to do his or her duty in this most crucial time in history.

"All preparations for a Nazi invasion on a great scale are steadily going forward," he said.

"We are prepared to fight in every village and every street. It is with confidence I say: 'Let God determine the right'."

Germany's present attempt to gain daylight air mastery over Britain Churchill said, has "failed conspicuously."

"When I said recently that enemy air attacks could be doubled or trebled," he said, "I was not referring to barbarous attacks but to the great battle between our air force and the German.

"The German losses average 3 to 1 in machines and 6 to 1 in pilots.

"This effort of the Germans to secure daylight mastery over England is the crux of the war.

"So far it has failed conspicuously.

"If we go on for many more weeks, it will wear down the striking force of the German air force. This will give us a very great advantage.

"Meanwhile, all preparations for Nazi invasion on a great scale are speedily going forward.

"A large number of barges are moving down the coasts of Holland and Belgium to the French channel ports as far as the Bay of Biscay.

"Besides this, cargo and merchant ships are being moved through the Straits of Dover into the English channel, dodging alone from port to port under protection of new German batteries.

BANKHEAD ILL

Speaker Collapses Before Scheduled Radio Talk.

BALTIMORE — (AP) — Speaker William B. Bankhead, weakened by constant strain of congressional duties in the midst of a national emergency, remained under close medical observation at his hotel today after collapsing half an hour before a scheduled nation-wide radio address.

The 66-year-old Alabaman, who took over in 1936 a job which had claimed the lives of three men in four years, fainted in his room last night from what Dr. George W. Calver, capital physician, said was an "excruciatingly painful" attack of sciatica.

Although Dr. Calver issued a midnight bulletin saying his patient was "resting easily," the physician spent most of the night in the Bankhead suite, cat-napping on a lounge.

Motorists Stage Rush To Obtain Driver Licenses

With the first two days of this year showing an increase in sales of more than 200 over a like period last year, a record sale of drivers' licenses during the month was predicted by Richland County Auto club officials today.

Since opening day of sale Monday, long lines have been forming in the office during the rush hours, Jack Berger, Auto club official, said.

In the first two days 663 operators' licenses have been issued as against 447 issued during the first two days of last year, an increase over last year of 216.

Reports for the first two days this year also showed that 55 chauffeurs' licenses had been issued as against 57 during the same period last year.

Last year 20,711 operators' licenses were issued.

In an effort to reach final agreement on the type of parking meters to be installed in downtown Mansfield, Mayor W. J. Locke today called a meeting of city officials and the head of the citizens' traffic committee for this afternoon at the mayor's office.

Roosevelt Opens Third Term Campaign By Radio Tonight

WASHINGTON — (UP) — President Roosevelt formally opens his third term re-election campaign tonight in an address seeking to hold the vast labor electorate which aided his 1932 and 1936 triumphs.

Tonight at 9:30 p. m., he will speak before the annual convention of the AFL's International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America.

Mr. Roosevelt may use the labor meeting to answer labor's criticism to peace-time conscription which originally was opposed by both the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor. AFL President William Green announced Monday, however, that his organization now would support any draft bill passed by congress and signed by the president.

Mr. Roosevelt has designated his address tonight as political and his secretary Stephen T. Early said that in "all probability" it will be "the labor speech of the campaign."

The Democratic national committee will pay for time on the National and Columbia networks to broadcast it.

Delayed Bomb Blasts British Royal Palace

King's Study, Queen's Drawing Room, and Princesses' Swimming Pool Wrecked By Blast.

(By United Press)

LONDON—A 250-pound delayed action bomb dropped from a German war plane exploded on the grounds of Buckingham palace early Tuesday, damaging King George's study and Queen Elizabeth's drawing room.

Almost all of the windows on the north side of the palace were shattered, a 15-foot deep crater was torn in the ground, 20 holes were punched in the roof by shrapnel and the swimming pool used by Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose was wrecked.

The royal family was absent at the time of the blast and there were no casualties. The bomb exploded about 1:30 a. m. on Tuesday. The king and queen later inspected the damage.

The household staff of footmen and maids was in underground shelters when the 250-pound bomb exploded. That, together with the delay in the explosion, accounted for the fact that there were no casualties.

The bomb fell near the Belgian suite of the palace. Among the rooms which suffered shattered windows were the king's study and the queen's drawing room. If they had been occupied by their majesties they obviously would have been endangered by flying glass.

The palace at the west end of St. James park, originally was built by Lord Goring during the reign of James I, but was rebuilt

CRASH FATAL

Motorist Fatally Injured at Greenwich; Wife Hurt.

WILLARD — Lewis Gordon, 36, of La Grange, died yesterday at Willard Emergency hospital from injuries received in an automobile accident on U. S. Route 224 in Greenwich. His wife, Rhoda, 32, was critically injured.

Highway patrolmen said the accident occurred when Gordon's automobile struck a car driven by William Purdy as Purdy came out of a side street. Gordon's vehicle glanced off Purdy's automobile and crashed into a tree.

Gordon was rushed to Willard Emergency hospital. He died a few hours later of a fractured skull and crushed chest.

Mrs. Gordon received head and chest injuries and a fractured right arm. Her condition was said to be "critical."

ASHURST SLIPS IN SENATE RACE

Colorful Capital Figure Loses Arizona Vote; Vandenberg Wins Renomination.

(By Associated Press)

Mounting returns from Tuesday's primary elections found Senator Ashurst (D-Ariz.), long a capital figure, in an apparently losing fight today in his sixth bid for renomination, but the prospects were happier for three of his colleagues.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) was assured of renomination by an overwhelming lead. Senator Shipstead, Farmer Laborite who joined Republican ranks this summer, enjoyed a wide lead in Minnesota over a field of eight as the choice of his adopted party. And in Vermont Senator Austin received renomination unopposed.

Ashurst, whose opposition to the conscription bill was urged against him in the Arizona campaign, trailed his opponent, Ernest W. McFarland by a vote of almost two-to-one. Ashurst has been sen-

PROMISE RETALIATION

Say British Used Flares To Mark Targets; Many Art Treasures Damaged.

By PIERRE S. HUSS
(By International News Service)

BERLIN — Dropping bombs that tore holes in the garden of the United States embassy, damaged valuable Berlin art treasures and hit the German capital's government section, British raiders showered tons of bombs on the city today in the heaviest attack they have yet unleashed.

The United States embassy, within a stone's throw of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's chancellery, was shaken as three incendiary bombs fell in the garden.

In addition, embassy officials said, explosive bombs, either duds or delayed action missiles, dug two deep holes in the grounds and one bomb splinter smashed a window on the first floor of the embassy building, slightly damaging the wall.

The embassy garden was roped off as a precautionary measure pending investigation by police and experts.

In one residential area, officials declared, entire blocks of buildings were rendered unsafe by the hail of incendiary bombs that fell from the raiding planes.

With many houses in danger of collapsing, this region was evacuated by residents in favor of safer quarters.

Altogether, it was announced, five persons were killed and a few others injured during the raid, in the course of which the famed fire gutted Reichstag building—a world-renowned landmark of Chancellor Hitler's rise to power was struck by an incendiary bomb. Quick action by fire fighters prevented serious damage.

Scores of incendiary missiles crashed around the government section in the heart of the city and hit the famous Brandenburg gate.

Surveying the damage, German quarters predicted swift retaliatory blows against the Whitehall district of London and the houses of parliament in the British capital.

Air raid sirens rang in Berlin at 12:55 a. m. and the all-clear

WASHINGTON — (UP) — President Roosevelt today called in state department and power commission advisers to confer on the controversial St. Lawrence Great Lakes power agreement which has been under consideration for years.

Mother Who Left Children At Home Alone Sent To 'Works'

When a 22-year-old Mansfield mother was sentenced to the Marysville reformatory today for one year for abandoning her two small children, probate court authorities were immediately faced with a problem of finding a home for the children whose father is in the Mansfield reformatory.

The mother, Mrs. Louella Kiley, 33½ Buckingham street, was sentenced by Probate Judge C. J. Anderson who found her guilty of leaving the children, one and three years old, alone at home last Saturday night while she allegedly was out with a "boy friend."

Probate court officers said they would attempt to place the children with relatives although they have been unable so far to find any who would assume the responsibility of caring for them.

Judge Anderson said Mrs. Kiley had been warned frequently during recent weeks about caring for the children and had been threatened with a prison sentence.

The children's father, Floyd Kiley, was sentenced to the Mansfield reformatory several months ago by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston. Kiley was first placed on probation after pleading guilty to a non-support charge and was sentenced after he violated his probation.

500 Trapped In English School Believed Dead

Only Few Rescued Alive From Debris As British Capital Subjected To New Terrific Attacks; Hospitals Throughout City Hit.

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(INS)—The fantastic threat that 10,000 plane loads of bombs will henceforth be sent across the English channel to bomb London daily was voiced in official Berlin tonight. Informed quarters said German reprisal attacks would increase tremendously "with as many as 2,500 bombers taking to the air at the same time and reloading in France to make four trips daily to London."

By ROBERT G. NIXON
(INS Staff Correspondent)

LONDON—Bomb-battered London was subjected to a terrific new attack from the skies this afternoon as rescue workers struggled to dig the city and its hundreds of victims out of the debris of last night's eight hour onslaught.

Soon after the second new air raid warning of the day sounded at 3:18 p. m. (9:18 a. m. EST), a continuous thud of heavy caliber bombs was heard throughout the entire London area.

Missiles of heaviest caliber were dropping all over the city.

It was the first serious daylight raid carried out by German planes in some time.

The furious new attack came even as rescue workers in the east end made new attempts to reach possible survivors of a group of 500 evacuees trapped in a school building which was demolished by a single direct hit.

Virtually all hope was abandoned that any might still be alive.

At the time of the new attack, London afternoon newspapers were just appearing on the streets with disclosure that Buckingham palace had been severely damaged by explosion of a delayed-action bomb dropped in one of the week-end German raids.

The roar of heavy anti-aircraft fire showed that an undisclosed number of German bombers had succeeded in reaching the defenses of the city.

Royal Air Force planes went aloft immediately to engage the attackers. Machine-gun fire was clearly heard intermittently during pauses in the anti-aircraft shelling and the crash of falling bombs.

Londoners, red-eyed and weary after a sleepless night but still trying to carry on in the face of the most terrific bombardment visited on the city except Rotterdam raced to the air raid shelters when the sirens sounded.

Even far underground, the noise

FROST ARRIVES, CITY SHIVERS

Mercury Drops to 35 Degrees But Crops Remain Intact; Cool Spell to Stay.

Mansfielders shivered in fall-like weather today as the temperature fell to 35 degrees bringing the season's first frost.

The frost was light, however, and it was believed there was only slight damage to crops. Farmers feared that late corn will be killed if the temperature drops any lower within the next two weeks.

The 35-degree reading here was the lowest officially recorded in Ohio. Bucyrus reported 36 with light frost. It was 39 in Toledo, 41 in Columbus, and 41 at Cleveland.

Fair and continued cool weather was forecast for tonight and Thursday with the possibility of light frost again tonight and Thursday night.

With the sun partly hidden by clouds, the mercury moved up to 60 at noon today as compared to yesterday's peak of 65 degrees.

Cleveland had light snow last night, but it was so high over the city that only airplane pilots saw it. Pilots arriving at Municipal airport said they passed through flurries 3,500 feet above the city where the temperature was 26 degrees.

RULE ON NAMES

Election Board Acts on Red Petitions Signers Today.

The Richland county election board was scheduled to meet this afternoon to rule on the validity of signatures on two Communist petitions which board clerks finished checking this morning.

A. F. Porter, clerk of the board, still declined to comment on the petitions, explaining that information on the number of valid signatures will not be available until the board acts on the petitions.

Prosecutor G. W. Marriott, who said he would investigate charges that some of the signatures were obtained by misrepresentation, called Secretary of State George Neffner this morning for a ruling on whether M. J. Beers, Mansfield, a registered Democrat, could legally circulate the petitions of another party.

Beers, who has been voting in Democratic primaries, admitted circulating one of the Communist petitions. He said he carried the petition because he thinks "this country is moving toward Fascism."

Brother, Never Again Will I Drink That Stuff

Honest injun, we ain't fooling. You aren't seeing things. The pretty faces above are members of the Dartmouth Indians' football team. Of course the boys are wearing realistic masks. Left to right? Shucks, what difference does it make if we said Chief Oskewoowoo was second from right or standing in rear? They all look alike to us—and you, too.

John Hallabrin May Hold Down Halfback Position

COLUMBUS—(UP)—For the first time in several autumns, not more than one sophomore newcomer is likely to crash the first team elite of Ohio State football this fall.

* * *

Blessed with a wealth of seasoned material. Coach Francis Schmidt lost little time in choosing a starting lineup and veterans from last season's Big Ten titleholders held down all but one of the 11 berths.

On the line is Claude White, the No 2 All-American candidate at center; Bill Nosker and Len Thom, two veterans at guard Charley Maag and Jim Daniell, at tackle and Charley Anderson and Frank Clair at end Nosker, Maag Daniell and Clair are regulars from last year

So the way of a scarlet and gray sophomore will be difficult at least until and unless the "chosen" should break under the pressure of a tough schedule.

Schmidt sent his 65 huskies through a stiff workout for the initial practice yesterday but curtailed the afternoon session an hour out of "first day" session.

But sideline observers believe the current Buck squad will be off to the fastest start in years and many predict a hard scrimmage this Saturday. The first game with Pittsburgh then will be only two weeks off

The opening day disclosed that Jack Graf No 2 signal-caller last year, will stay right on that job again instead of being shifted to Zadworney's old spot. Likewise staying put was John Hallabrin, bruising fullback understudy who had been mentioned as a right halfback candidate.

* * *

There was a good chance that Schmidt might make the shifts later, if Sweeney and Novak should prove too light for the job Both tip the scales under 180. Kinkade weighs 184.

As usual, Schmidt devoted most of the practice to offensive formations with frequent throwing of passes The same tactics prevailed in practice sessions last year but when the game whistle blew the Bucks turned to power.

Golfers Pair Off In Meet

64 Shotmakers Seek Title In National Amateur.

MAMARONECK, N. Y.—(AP)—The qualifying scramble ended 64 earnest young golfers from the cities and from the forks of the creek paired off at Winged Foot club today in two "sudden death" rounds of match play in the national amateur championship

* * *

In the last two days the field of hopefuls had been reduced from a cumbersome 146. At dusk tonight there were due to be only 16 left to carry on the cut-throat competition. They go fast in the amateur.

* * *

Gone were such notables as Johnny Goodman, George Dunlap, jr., Chick Evans and Francis Ouimet—all former champions. Gone also was young John Cree of Hamburg, N. Y., who shot a sparkling 71 on his first qualifying round and then soared to a remarkable 87 on his second try.

Dick Chapman of Winged Foot was the one they all were watching as he teed off in his first test today. Dick, a night club crooner during the off-season, shot two sub-par rounds of 71-69 to capture medal honors by what apparently was a record margin.

Four players tied at 146 for the two rounds—George Dawson of Chicago, Maurice McCarthy, jr., of Cincinnati, who led at the end of the first round; Tom Whiteway of Cleveland, and Harold Mandly of Avon, Conn.

* * *

Bing Crosby missed the train with his 83-77, much to the disappointment of the tournament committee and an adoring gallery, but he made a commendable comeback.

* * *

First round pairings for today included: (qualifying scores in brackets), Henry Pabian, Steubenville, O. (151) vs. W. B. McCullough, jr., Abington, Pa. (145).

No GHOST Streets In Tiffin!
THE ADVERTISER-TRIBUNE
TIFFIN, OHIO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1940.

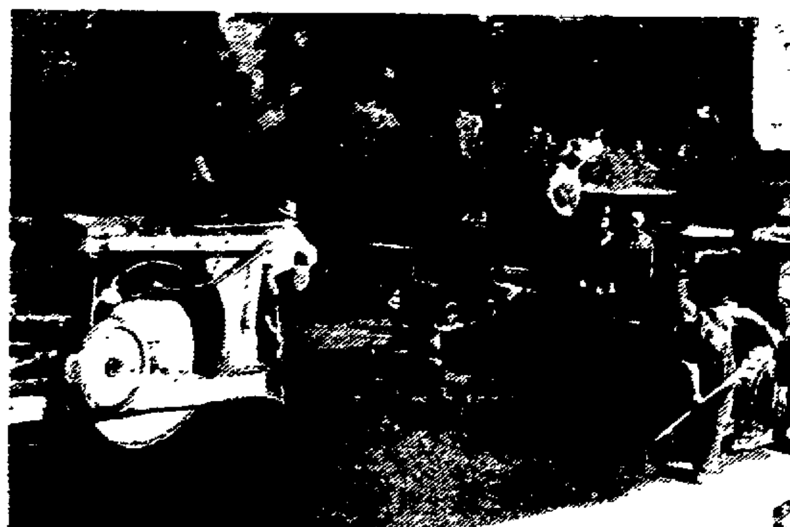
RESURFACING OF 3 STREETS FINISHED

Resurfacing of South Washington East Perry and East Market streets, a state-city project, was completed Wednesday by the Mansfield Asphalt Paving Co.

Material for the job was obtained at a plant maintained by the company at Bloomville. All equipment was moved Wednesday afternoon

Traffic was maintained on the streets while the work was under way The contract was awarded after a state letting Aug 9 and work was started Aug 19 Cost of the project was $13,865 of which the city contributed $5,000

This work was originally set up as a WPA brick turning project and the original estimate was $87,000 City Engineer Herman G Kuhn said.



TIFFIN STREET IS RESURFACED

Workers of the Mansfield Asphalt Paving Co of Mansfield are shown on the last lap of the South Washington street resurfacing job Improvement of this street and East Market and East Perry streets established a new record here Bids were received Aug 9, work was started Aug 19 and completed Sept 4 or 57 days ahead of schedule City officials describe the improvements as exceptionally satisfactory Originally estimated at $87,000 as a PWA brick turning project the three sections of street were resurfaced with asphalt at $13,865.20.

CONSIDER PETITION FOR COE ST. REPAIR

Property Owners May Ask Resurfacing.

Possibility of resurfacing Coe street was seen by city officials today as a result of interest shown by property owners in similar improvements on South Washington East Perry and East Market streets

Property owners were said to be considering circulating a petition for resurfacing and agreeing to pay a flat front foot payment to cover the cost.

Work of resurfacing South Washington East Perry and East Market streets is expected to be completed today by the Mansfield Asphalt Paving Co

The work progressed rapidly on Washington street as the brick pavement required no preparatory patching Finishing touches were to be placed on Perry and Market street today

Resurfacing [illegible] of the driveways on the three streets was also being carried out today under arrangements made by property owners with the company

The resurfacing of the three streets was a state highway department project toward which the city contributed $5,000

COUNCIL CLEARS WAY TO IMPROVE WALTER AVENUE

Legislation Approved But Paving Will Be Delayed Until Spring.

City council last night cleared the way for an $11,500 street improvement but the project is not expected to be started until spring

This was disclosed when City Engineer W. C. Statler warned council that they were "gambling with the weather" if they undertook the paving of Walter avenue this fall.

He pointed out that although council had approved legislation authorizing the work, that there was little likelihood that concrete could be put down before freezing weather.

Statler said that a great amount of work incidental to the paving including the grading of the street, lowering of water and sewer lines and utilities would have to be completed before the concrete could be put down and that it might take the next 60 days to get the work done.

It was agreed that the paving this fall would be left to the discretion of the engineer

The meeting last night had been called by council's street committee for the purpose of approving the legislation that work could be started and the paving job completed before winter.

The improvement includes the paving of Walter avenue from Sturges avenue to Wood street.

The property owners share of the cost is estimated at $11,000, street assessment bonds to be issued to finance the expense, while the city's share is figured at $500.

Preliminary legislation was also approved, calling for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Grover street from Sturges avenue to Lexington avenue. Final action will be taken on the improvement next month.

Spinach Growers See Carrots As New Money Crop

CARRIZO SPRINGS, Tex —(INS)—Dimmit county, known as part of the nation's center for growing of "green gold"—spinach—is starting in now to prepare another money crop: carrots.

Adverse weather has little effect and the entire crop has always moved. In fact, farmers around Carrizo Springs have not been able to meet the demand for mixed winter vegetables, of which carrots form a big part.

Carrots planted in late summer or early fall are ready for harvest 120 to 150 days later. It costs $40 to $50 per acre to manure a crop, for which irrigation is essential. The yield is from 1,200 to 2,000 dozen bunches per acre. The past season, with a fair stand of good quality carrots, the crop was valued at $75 to $150 an acre.

Recreation should provide a change from normal routine not merely physical activity, the journal advises. Eat regularly and not between meals, and relax completely several times each day, the journal said

LETTERS FROM HOME SHOW MEN NOT JUST BATTLE MACHINES

BERLIN —(AP)— Back of the news of divisions regiments, companies fighting and dying is the ever poignant story that goes beyond marching formations to the men themselves.

How close the tie is between men in the field and the home is shown in letters which correspondents of the Associated Press brought back from France, where they found them lying beside gutted tanks on shell pocked roads recently the vortex of heavy fighting.

Scattered among copies of "The Soldier's Prayer Book," and French-English dictionaries "Lil's and Bobby's" letter to "My Darling John" was found

Writing from Camberwell, "Lil" in a firm round hand says:

"I have enclosed Bobby's picture & I hope you will like it. I think you will agree that he has got very tall and is getting very fat in the face He is still saying when my dad comes home he is going to bring me a three wheeled bike home, so if you should manage to get him a little toy out there cheap, then send it to him and address it to Bobby himself he would think himself so grown up, dear"

Another note, stamped upon and dusty written in pencil tells of Bobby's disappointment at not etting a card on his birthday, and Bobby's devotion to his dad:

"Of course Bobby is still talking about you. He doesn't forget you. You needn't worry about that. He still says 'Good night and God bless you' to your photo. Can't you have a good one of you taken out there?"

Private Arthur C——, of the 13th Field Ambulance B E F came from a village just a little but north of Middlebrough Found on the road was a closely written letter of many pages from his wife Nellie.

"My Dearest Darling," writes Nellie, "Just a few lines in reply to your most welcome letters Nos. 18 and 19 and many thanks Hon

"I am still not getting any sleep Hon but your Mum says that I will when it is all over and I guess I will be able to sleep that whole fortnight I am in bed as I am dead tired

"I don't think you will have any cause for jealousy over our son as I know when you come home he will get quite a number of kisses and cuddles from you. . . . What happiness we will know when we are all united, especially as we have a home of our own. Everything will be complete, darling.

"Then in the summer you and baby and I can go for those long walks we always planned on having. Of course I still insist that you push the pram. You know, I will be quite annoyed if you don't . . . His Daddy will mean so much to him He is going to be brought up to think that there is no one like his Dad, just the same as I do I love you more than anyone dear. . . ."

"The house of ours does come up to all my requirements, dear, and I hope we have quite a number of happy years in it once you are back home it is really quite comfortable for us darling and I know you will like it as much as I . . .."

"Mon Cher Danielle" "Cher Pierre" also left written scraps out of their lives along the countless roads of battle, letters to men who were much more than machine gunners, much more than tank drivers, as one remote from the smell of powder often forgets

They were fatheres, sweethearts sons, brothers whose letters clearly showed their interests and hearts lay far from the sound of Battle in some sleepy little hamlet with family and friends.

CALLS EROSION WORST ENEMY

Fall of Empires Pointed Out By Scientist as Result of Earth Movement.

BERKELEY, Cal —(INS)— The greatest enemy of civilization is erosion.

The picture of how the gradual but steady ruination of the land has made a salty desolation of Babylon and deposed eleven successive empires in Mesopatamia in the past 7,000 years is given by Dr. W. G Lowdermilk, assistant chief of the United States Soil Conservation service.

In a lecture at the University of California, Dr. Lowdermilk stated:

"These dead cities in their almost perfect state of preservation seem to have been more asleep than dead for thirteen centuries. They have not been buried by erosion but stand high on their rock foundations on the limestone hills, from which three to six feet of productive soil have been washed away.

"This soil was the basis of a remarkable prosperity and opulence in ancient times for this region with its populous centers.

"The good earth is now completely gone from the slopes except where walls of ruined buildings have held back small patches of soil. In these patches a few vines or olive trees stand as sorry remnants of a former profitable land use. Otherwise the landscape is gray desolation, glaring in the summer heat and bleak in the winter cold.

"Today, after thirteen centuries of neglect and patch cultivation to cereals by semi-nomadic descendants of the invaders, and of overgrazing by their goats, soil erosion has completed the destruction of the good earth with a thoroughness that has left this once fertile land a complete man-made desert, void of water, vegetation and soil."

MILLION DOLLAR GIFT CAN'T BE KEPT UNDER HAT

Montreal Publisher Donates Fighter Planes; Other Papers Print It.

(By Associated Press)

MONTREAL — Grey-haired, tight-lipped John W. McConnell, a newspaperman who ought to know better, realizes now that you can't make somebody a gift of $1,000,000—even the British empire—and keep it a secret.

But that's just what McConnell, publisher of the Montreal Star, attempted to do when he casually wrote a million-dollar check to buy fighter planes for the battle of Britain. The next thing he did was to instruct his own newspaper not to print a line about it.

Then came an acknowledgement "with pride and gratitude" by British minister of aircraft production Lord Beaverbrook. The news got around town in a hurry, but the Star had its orders and McConnell's own employes learned about it through the columns of rival newspapers.

He finally got around to explaining he gave the money as an expression of "unbound admiration and gratitude for the heroic work of the Royal Air Force."

That brief explanation amounted almost to a verbal outburst by this man of few words who has been something of a legendary figure in Canada's financial world since he was a young man.

Few people had heard much about McConnell when a brief notice in the Star two years ago announced that he had taken over the presidency of the newspaper.

At that time he gave up 14 directorships in some of Canada's biggest industrial organizations, rolled up his sleeves and went to work directing the Star, one of Canada's largest newspapers.

Until then McConnell had spent 40 of his 62 years blazing a meteoric career in Canada's commercial life

In appearance, Mr. McConnell gives the impression of great driving force and intellectual ability. His dark hair is liberally shot with grey, shaggy eyebrows give him an aggressive appearance. He speaks to the point, and never leaves a visitor in doubt as to where he stands on any particular question.

He was active in war loan and Red Cross work in the last war, and now devotes much time to welfare organizations. He lives on exclusive Pine avenue, halfway up Mount Treal, maintains summer homes at nearby Dorval and Val Davis and once was host to the king of Siam.

Council Gets Proposal to Place Rubbish Cans In City.

Council's street committee had before it today a proposal for furnishing sanitary waste paper containers on downtown streets.

The proposal submitted by Harry Boyer, 103 Glenwood Heights, was presented to council last night and referred to the street committee by President Howard G. Miller.

A similar proposal filed with council last week by a Columbus firm was not read. Councilmen said the proposal was left with them and no action was sought.

Boyer proposed to furnish the rubbish containers, empty them and see that they are kept in repair, without cost to the city. He asks council to enter into an agreement with him for supplying the containers

BIG NEWS . . . IS GOOD NEWS FOR ADVERTISERS!

A lot of thoughtful advertisers have been raising questions about the potency of newspaper advertising during "Big News" periods When news interest shoots upward, do advertisers' opportunities decline? Do exciting headlines and dispatches cause people to pay less attention to the ads?

Current newspaper research indicates the opposite is true.

The Second World War certainly qualifies as "Big News" In the past ten months, this war has demonstrated three ways in which "Big News" affects newspaper reading.

First MORE PEOPLE READ NEWSPAPERS A recent study made by The Bureau of Advertising reveals substantial circulation gains by newspapers in all parts of the country in May and June of this year over May and June of last year. (It was early in May that "Total War" began.) Naturally, the more news there is, and the more important it is, the more papers are bought and read. Partial news coverage by other media merely whets people's desire to get the WHOLE story . . . in newspapers.

Second, PEOPLE SPEND MORE TIME WITH THEIR NEWSPAPERS. War news or other "Big News" usually means ADDITIONAL reading . . . over and above the habitual reading of the local news, the regular departments, the continuing features, and the advertisements in the newspaper.

Third, and even more important, "Big News" tends to INCREASE, RATHER THAN DECREASE, THE READING OF NEWSPAPER ADS.

Evidence From All Angles Proves That "Big News" Is GOOD News For Advertisers

CHAPTER XV

When Carol glanced at Alan, he shook his head, his smile indicating a bored tolerance of the old man. She glanced away quickly, feeling that it was unfair to take advantage of Mr. Hartley's sightlessness by exchanging meaningful glances with Alan. She felt, too, that Mr. Hartley's blindness had intensified his other senses and that he was acutely conscious of the personality and character of the people who came to see him. Moreover, the picture she had carried in her mind of a miserly, cross old man with an occasional failing memory vanished. In fairness to Alan she thought that perhaps Mr. Hartley was doing his gallant best to be nice to her while with Alan on business and financial matters he was unreasonable and difficult. In any event she knew that with her Mr. Hartley was gentle, humorous and wise, and she understood his indisputable place in the community. Like a classic, one would like and appreciate him only after a long acquaintance.

"You're going to be married," Mr. Hartley said. "It's good to marry a woman with a beautiful voice, Alan, my boy. She never loses that."

To Carol he directed his next words. "Alan has been like a son to me. I knew his father before him. A fine lad. Used to play in the street in this neighborhood. And his mother . . . never a better woman. Religious and charitable. I knew that a son of theirs was a lad I could trust." Nodding, smiling, he said, "People don't aim to cheat you but temptation is a devil that gets the best of us and some people might figure they need my money more than they do . . ."

"I'm glad you gave Alan your faith."

"You've seen a great many changes here, haven't you?"

"Newton was a village when Pat Burke came here. He was one of my best customers. A big man with a big laugh and a big appetite. Ah, yes, can't replace a man like Pat Burke. Men like him were builders and gamblers. Not many like him any more. The young men want an easier life and quicker money today." Chuckling again, he tapped his forehead with his right index finger. "I forget so much. The children of my old neighbors come to see me and I forget they aren't children now but have children of their own. I keep things for the babies to play with. Is Alan asleep?"

"No, Mr. Hartley. I'm very much awake."

Carol said, "My father would like to know you, Mr. Hartley. May I bring him to see you? We've been in Newton only two years and he'd like to hear about the old days here."

"Indeed! By all means!"

"And if you'd like it, I'll come and take you for a drive sometime in the country."

"You see, I told you. Every one is so good to me."

* * *

Alan was looking at his watch and mopping his forehead. His expression told her that he was uncomfortable and wanted to go.

When she told Mr. Hartley that they must go, he nodded and did not protest. Again her hand took his firmly and again she felt that the faded blue eyes could see her.

On the street Alan sniffed the sultry air and then lost no time in leaving the neighborhood where his father had played as a boy.

* * *

"You were quite a hit with the old gentleman, Carol," Alan said with a half laugh as they drove away.

"Mr. Hartley's nice, Alan. I like him. I wasn't merely pretending to be interested."

"You've never had to talk to him about money, about his real estate and investments. For a man who has invested as wisely as he, he's incredibly stupid. He wants to know about houses he sold ten years ago."

Alan spoke rather sharply and turned his face away from Carol, leaving her to stare at his profile, the stubborn chin and smooth blond hair, and feeling nothing at his nearness. Nothing. . . . Yet today at the quarry the blurred figure of Norman had made her feel an electric awareness.

Later she said, "Perhaps you are Mr. Hartley's heir, Alan, and that's why he didn't ask you to draw up his will. He didn't want you to know. He's terribly fond of you and apparently you were the only person he felt he could trust with his affairs."

"Whatever gave you that idea, Carol? No, it—it couldn't be! It. . . ." Pressing his foot again on the accelerator, he gave another half laugh. "I'm afraid you're too optimistic. His will was drawn up before I took over his affairs, I believe."

"It was just an idea, that's all."

"It'll be an eccentric will. I told you that before. He'll probably leave everything for a park and swimming pool for the poor children in his neighborhood."

"I wouldn't call that eccentric. I'd call it—humane."

* * *

He took her home and they went to the garden in the rear of the house where Dr. Tallant was enjoying his pipe and the untroubled summer sky. Carol only vaguely heard the conversation of her father and Alan; her mind drifted, as always of late it was drifting, to Norman. To think of him brought him near, sitting beside her, speaking to her, laughing with her, teasing her, lifting her again to ecstatic heights never reached before. Dreams, so incredibly dear and clear, of places where they would never be together, and things they would never say to each other. They were the places he and Edwina would be together and the things they would say to each other.

When Alan spoke to her, she sat up quickly, thinking what good friends her father and Alan were and that her father's last big problem would be solved when he saw her safely married. It was as futile to fight as it was to dream. The roots of her life had begun to grow with the roots of Alan's. They could not be pulled up or planted elsewhere.

In the presence of her father, Alan's good-night kiss was brief and hurried.

As she went into her house Dr. Tallant asked, "Is everything all right, dear? We haven't seen much of each other lately. We must have one of our good talks soon."

"Yes, dear, we must." She thought: No, we mustn't. I've always been honest with you and now I cannot be honest.

* * *

As on many previous Saturday evenings, Edwina and Norman had been dancing at the country club. When the crowd thinned they left and before long Norman's black car passed between the stone pillars and stopped in the driveway beside the great white house.

"Coming in, Norman? It's early and much too warm to sleep. I feel like a mouse alone in this house."

He smiled. "It's one o'clock. What about your reputation?"

"A man who cares about my good name? You are unique, darling. Come in. We'll dig up something to eat."

Her long white crepe dinner frock trailed the velvety grass as she led the way to the house. Never, she thought, as she opened the door and stepped into the vast hall, had she taken the beauty and richness of the house for granted. And more than ever recently had she felt a strong pride of possession. The library, filled with the fine books that Patrick Burke had never had time to read, and the dining room gleaming with silver, were dark. Throwing off the light blue wool coat, she went to the drawing room which, despite its luxurious furnishings, was strangely dominated by the portrait of Patrick Burke above the fireplace. When she opened the doors that led to the terrace, a breeze filtered through.

* * *

She had been impatient to leave the club; she had made her plans. Not much longer could she endure uncertainties and the accumulating bills that were gnawing her into panic-stricken helplessness and sleepless nights. She had learned patience and humility in her waiting and as the summer days went on, she had not swerved from her silent promise to do anything and everything to make Norman happy—if only he would marry her. Good companions they were at dancing and tennis and swimming, but Norman had not once overstepped the bounds of friendship. For the latter she admired him, knowing they had a foundation of friendship few could attain. But time was rushing by and her patience had worn to a line so fine that it was breaking.

He was taking a cigaret from a box on the low teakwood table when she went to him and looked up at him so appealingly that he changed his mind about the cigaret.

"Norman, in New York you said that if you kissed any girl this summer it would be I."

"Why play with dynamite when we've been having fun, Edwina? We haven't needed that to stimulate us."

"I'm a girl who's in love with you, and to a girl in love the fun we've had, the companionship — though it's been wonderful isn't— isn't quite enough, darling."

He stood there, frowning. "You love me, Edwina? Forgive me. I didn't know it. I swear I didn't know it!"

* * *

Hating the lie and afraid that she would cry out her plight to him, she swallowed hard and said, "Only once before have I been as honest as this. It isn't good technique, I know. A man still likes to be the hunter. You can't have any illusions about me. You've heard too much about me."

"On the contrary," he said seriously, "I've a lot of very small illusions about you, Edwina. You're the first real friend of your sex I've ever had. I value my friendships with men, men like Dick, for instance, but the friendship of a girl, of you, has been one of the most stimulating things that's ever happened to me. We've had fun. We've been honest. We've been wholesome. I don't care what you've done or what any one has said or is saying about you. I know you. I might have played at being in love with you and made love to you, but I thought we had something better. Again, forgive me. I knew you liked me but I thought I was sort of time-killer for you during your summer at home."

A time-killer! Merciful heaven!

* * *

He went on, concerned and serious. "I thought we were pretty sophisticated people, Edwina. If I've done or said anything to make you believe I've thought of you as anything more than a swell friend, I'm sorry. That's a thin 'out' for a man, isn't it? Just to say he's sorry. I didn't know, I swear I didn't know that you were in love with me."

She clutched at a straw. "Don't you ever intend to marry?" She walked away from him then and with her back to him she said, "I guess I'm not sophisticated. Love makes sophistication drop from you like an old, ragged garment. I've thought of us, the kind of wife I'd like to be to you, the life we could have together. I've thought that our companionship was the finest foundation possible."

"I—I went mad for a time, did mad, crazy things, because I was young and hurt and defiant and rich, and because I thought I could get away with it. I never want to go back to that sort of thing. I'm heartily sick of it." This part of it was true, she thought, so true. . . ." I'm behaving badly and this is very embarrassing to you, Norman. I leave you nothing to say except you're sorry you can't be in love with me."

"I wish I were. I wish I were. Marriage? I don't know. When the summer is over, maybe before it's over, I'm going back to take up where I left off. To me marriage has always been like the proverbial pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, something wonderful to hope for and win."

He went to her and put his hands on her shoulders. "Ed-wina, you flatter me more than I deserve. You make me feel that I don't recognize the pot of gold when it's being offered to me. Some people don't know when I'm serious and when I'm kidding. I've never been more serious in my life than I am now."

"You've said all the nice things. Thanks. And now, if you don't mind, I'd like to be alone."

"Sure you'd like to be alone?"

"Quite sure."

"I don't like to leave you feeling low like this."

She gave a low, husky chuckle. "I always fight things out best alone. I'm that sort of person. Please: . . ."

"If you say so. . . ."

She heard his cushioned footsteps as he left her and knew when he paused that he was glancing back at her. Then she heard him go out and presently the purr of the motor.

COUNCIL CLEARS WAY TO IMPROVE WALTER AVENUE

Legislation Approved But Paving Will Be Delayed Until Spring.

City council last night cleared the way for an $11,500 street improvement but the project is not expected to be started until spring

This was disclosed when City Engineer W. C. Statler warned council that they were "gambling with the weather" if they undertook the paving of Walter avenue this fall.

He pointed out that although council had approved legislation authorizing the work, that there was little likelihood that concrete could be put down before freezing weather

Statler said that a great amount of work incidental to the paving including the grading of the street, lowering of water and sewer lines and utilities would have to be completed before the concrete could be put down and that it might take the next 60 days to get the work done.

It was agreed that the paving this fall would be left to the discretion of the engineer.

The meeting last night had been called by council's street committee for the purpose of approving the legislation that work could be started and the paving job completed before winter.

The improvement includes the paving of Walter avenue from Sturges avenue to Wood street.

The property owners share of the cost is estimated at $11,000, street assessment bonds to be issued to finance the expense, while the city's share is figured at $500.

Preliminary legislation was also approved, calling for the construction of a sanitary sewer on Grover street from Sturges avenue to Lexington avenue. Final action will be taken on the improvement next month.

Spinach Growers See Carrots As New Money Crop

CARRIZO SPRINGS, Tex.—(INS)—Dimmit county, known as part of the nation's center for growing of "green gold"—spinach—is starting in now to prepare another money crop, carrots.

Adverse weather has little effect and the entire crop has always moved. In fact, farmers around Carrizo Springs have not been able to meet the demand for mixed winter vegetables, of which carrots form a big part.

Carrots planted in late summer or early fall are ready for harvest 120 to 150 days later. It costs $40 to $50 per acre to manure a crop, for which irrigation is essential. The yield is from 1,200 to 2,000 dozen bunches per acre. The past season, with a fair stand of good quality carrots, the crop was valued at $75 to $150 an acre.

GOOD ADVICE FOR JITTERBUG

CHICAGO—(UP)—Keep your feet on the floor and don't grit your teeth if you want to escape "nervous tension"

An issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association recommended elimination of "energy sapping" motions, monotony and immobility as the best means to avoid nervous tension, a product of civilization.

Recreation should provide a change from normal routine, not merely physical activity, the journal advises. Eat regularly and not between meals and relax completely several times each day, the journal said

LETTERS FROM HOME SHOW MEN NOT JUST BATTLE MACHINES

BERLIN —(AP)— Back of the news of divisions, regiments, companies fighting and dying is the ever poignant story that goes beyond marching formations to the men themselves

How close the tie is between men in the field and the home is shown in letters which correspondents of the Associated Press brought back from France, where they found them lying beside gutted tanks on shell pocked roads recently the vortex of heavy fighting.

Scattered among copies of "The Soldier's Prayer Book," and French-English dictionaries, "Lil's and Bobby's" letter to "My Darling John" was found.

Writing from Camberwell, "Lil" in a firm round hand says

"I have enclosed Bobby's picture & I hope you will like it I think you will agree that he has got very tall and is getting very fat in the face. He is still saying, when my dad comes home he is going to bring me a three wheeled bike home, so if you should manage to get him a little toy out there cheap, then send it to him and address it to Bobby himself he would think himself so grown up, dear."

Another note stamped upon and dusty, written in pencil tells of Bobby's disappointment at not getting a card on his birthday, and Bobby's devotion to his dad:

"Of course Bobby is still talking about you. He doesn't forget you. You needn't worry about that. He still says 'Good night and God bless you' to your photo. Can't you have a good one of you taken out there?"

Private Arthur C —— of the 13th Field Ambulance B. E. F. came from a village just a little bit north of Middlebrough Found on the road was a closely written letter of many pages from his wife Nellie.

"My Dearest Darling," writes Nellie "Just a few lines in reply to your most welcome letters Nos 18 and 19 and many thanks, Hon

"I am still not getting any sleep Hon but your Mum says that I will when it is all over and I guess I will be able to sleep that whole fortnight I am in bed as I am dead tired.

"I don't think you will have any cause for jealousy over our son as I know when you come home he will get quite a number of kisses and cuddles from you. . . . What happiness we will know when we are all united, especially as we have a home of our own. Everything will be complete, darling.

"Then in the summer you and baby and I can go for those long walks we always planned on having. Of course I still insist that you push the pram You know, I will be quite annoyed if you don't. . . . His Daddy will mean so much to him. He is going to be brought up to think that there is no one like his Dad, just the same as I do. I love you more than anyone dear. . . ."

"The house of ours does come up to all my requirements, dear, and I hope we have quite a number of happy years in it, once you are back home it is really quite comfortable for us, darling and I know you will like it as much as I . . . ."

"Mon Cher Danielle," "Cher Pierre" also left written scraps out of their lives along the countless roads of battle, letters to men who were much more than machine gunners, much more than tank drivers, as one remote from the smell of powder often forgets

They were fatheres, sweethearts, sons, brothers whose letters clearly showed their interests and hearts lay far from the sound of Battle in some sleepy little hamlet with family and friends.

TURTLE FOUND.

ENID Okla —(UP)— F. M. Lamar is looking for one Bill Statham to return Statham's pet terrapin. Lamar found the terrapin near his home On its back painted in red enamel were the words: "Bill Statham, August, 1918." The letters were legible despite the apparent 22 years they had been on the terrapin's shell.

Fall of Empires Pointed Out By Scientist as Result of Earth Movement.

BERKELEY, Cal —(INS)— The greatest enemy of civilization is erosion.

The picture of how the gradual but steady ruination of the land has made a salty desolation of Babylon and deposed eleven successive empires in Mesopatamia in the past 7,000 years is given by Dr. W. G. Lowdermilk, assistant chief of the United States Soil Conservation service

In a lecture at the University of California, Dr Lowdermilk stated.

"These dead cities in their almost perfect state of preservation seem to have been more asleep than dead for thirteen centuries They have not been buried by erosion but stand high on their rock foundations on the limestone hills, from which three to six feet of productive soil have been washed away.

"This soil was the basis of a remarkable prosperity and opulence in ancient times for this region with its populous centers.

"The good earth is now completely gone from the slopes except where walls of ruined buildings have held back small patches of soil. In these patches a few vines or olive trees stand as sorry remnants of a former profitable land use. Otherwise the landscape is gray desolation, glaring in the summer heat and bleak in the winter cold.

"Today, after thirteen centuries of neglect and patch cultivation to cereals by semi-nomadic descendants of the invaders, and of overgrazing by their goats, soil erosion has completed the destruction of the good earth with a thoroughness that has left this once fertile land a complete man-made desert, void of water, vegetation and soil"

Montreal Publisher Donates Fighter Planes; Other Papers Print It.

(By Associated Press)

MONTREAL — Grey-haired, tight-lipped John W. McConnell, a newspaperman who ought to know better, realizes now that you can't make somebody a gift of $1,000,000—even the British empire—and keep it a secret.

But that's just what McConnell, publisher of the Montreal Star, attempted to do when he casually wrote a million-dollar check to buy fighter planes for the battle of Britain. The next thing he did was to instruct his own newspaper not to print a line about it

Then came an acknowledgement "with pride and gratitude" by British minister of aircraft production Lord Beaverbrook. The news got around town in a hurry, but the Star had its orders and McConnell's own employes learned about it through the columns of rival newspapers.

He finally got around to explaining he gave the money as an expression of "unbound admiration and gratitude for the heroic work of the Royal Air Force."

That brief explanation amounted almost to a verbal outburst by this man of few words who has been something of a legendary figure in Canada's financial world since he was a young man

Few people had heard much about McConnell when a brief notice in the Star two years ago announced that he had taken over the presidency of the newspaper.

At that time he gave up 14 directorships in some of Canada's biggest industrial organizations, rolled up his sleeves and went to work directing the Star, one of Canada's largest newspapers

Until then McConnell had spent 40 of his 62 years blazing a meteoric career in Canada's commercial life

In appearance, Mr. McConnell gives the impression of great driving force and intellectual ability. His dark hair is liberally shot with grey, shaggy eyebrows give him an aggressive appearance. He speaks to the point, and never leaves a visitor in doubt as to where he stands on any particular question.

He was active in war loan and Red Cross work in the last war, and now devotes much time to welfare organizations. He lives on exclusive Pine avenue, halfway up Mount Treal, maintains summer homes at nearby Dorval and Val Davis and once was host to the king of Siam.

Council's street committee had before it today a proposal for furnishing sanitary waste paper containers on downtown streets

The proposal submitted by Harry Boyer, 103 Glenwood Heights, was presented to council last night and referred to the street committee by President Howard G Miller.

A similar proposal filed with council last week by a Columbus firm was not read Councilmen said the proposal was left with them and no action was sought.

Boyer proposed to furnish the rubbish containers, empty them and see that they are kept in repair, without cost to the city He asks council to enter into an agreement with him for supplying the containers.

BIG NEWS . . . IS GOOD NEWS FOR ADVERTISERS!

A lot of thoughtful advertisers have been raising questions about the potency of newspaper advertising during "Big News" periods. When news interest shoots upward, do advertisers' opportunities decline? Do exciting headlines and dispatches cause people to pay less attention to the ads?

Current newspaper research indicates the opposite is true.

The Second World War certainly qualifies as "Big News." In the past ten months, this war has demonstrated three ways in which "Big News" affects newspaper reading.

First, MORE PEOPLE READ NEWSPAPERS. A recent study made by The Bureau of Advertising reveals substantial circulation gains by newspapers in all parts of the country in May and June of this year over May and June of last year. (It was early in May that "Total War" began.) Naturally, the more news there is, and the more important it is, the more papers are bought and read. Partial news coverage by other media merely whets people's desire to get the WHOLE story . . . in newspapers.

Second, PEOPLE SPEND MORE TIME WITH THEIR NEWSPAPERS. War news or other "Big News" usually means ADDITIONAL reading . . . over and above the habitual reading of the local news, the regular departments, the continuing features, and the advertisements in the newspaper.

Third, and even more important, "Big News" tends to INCREASE, RATHER THAN DECREASE, THE READING OF NEWSPAPER ADS.

Evidence From All Angles Proves That "Big News" Is GOOD News For Advertisers

CHAPTER XV

When Carol glanced at Alan, he shook his head, his smile indicating a bored tolerance of the old man. She glanced away quickly, feeling that it was unfair to take advantage of Mr. Hartley's sightlessness by exchanging meaningful glances with Alan. She felt, too, that Mr. Hartley's blindness had intensified his other senses and that he was acutely conscious of the personality and character of the people who came to see him. Moreover, the picture she had carried in her mind of a miserly, cross old man with an occasional failing memory vanished. In fairness to Alan she thought that perhaps Mr. Hartley was doing his gallant best to be nice to her while with Alan on business and financial matters he was unreasonable and difficult. In any event she knew that with her Mr. Hartley was gentle, humorous and wise, and she understood his indisputable place in the community. Like a classic, one would like and appreciate him only after a long acquaintance.

"You're going to be married," Mr. Hartley said. "It's good to marry a woman with a beautiful voice, Alan, my boy. She never loses that."

To Carol he directed his next words. "Alan has been like a son to me. I knew his father before him. A fine lad Used to play in the street in this neighborhood. And his mother . . . never a better woman. Religious and charitable. I knew that a son of theirs was a lad I could trust." Nodding, smiling, he said, "People don't aim to cheat you but temptation is a devil that gets the best of us and some people might figure they need my money more than they do . . ."

"I'm glad you gave Alan your faith."

"You've seen a great many changes here, haven't you?"

"Newton was a village when Pat Burke came here. He was one of my best customers. A big man with a big laugh and a big appetite. Ah yes, can't replace a man like Pat Burke. Men like him were builders and gamblers. Not many like him any more. The young men want an easier life and quicker money today." Chuckling again, he tapped his forehead with his right index finger. "I forget so much. The children of my old neighbors come to see me and I forget they aren't children now but have children of their own. I keep things for the babies to play with. Is Alan asleep?"

"No, Mr. Hartley. I'm very much awake."

Carol said, "My father would like to know you, Mr. Hartley. May I bring him to see you? We've been in Newton only two years and he'd like to hear about the old days here."

"Indeed! By all means!"

"And if you'd like it, I'll come and take you for a drive sometime in the country."

"You see, I told you. Every one is so good to me."

* * *

Alan was looking at his watch and mopping his forehead. His expression told her that he was uncomfortable and wanted to go.

When she told Mr. Hartley that they must go, he nodded and did not protest. Again her hand took his firmly and again she felt that the faded blue eyes could see her.

On the street Alan sniffed the sultry air and then lost no time in leaving the neighborhood where his father had played as a boy.

* * *

"You were quite a hit with the old gentleman, Carol," Alan said with a half laugh as they drove away.

"Mr Hartley's nice, Alan. I like him. I wasn't merely pretending to be interested."

"You've never had to talk to him about money, about his real estate and investments. For a man who has invested as wisely as he, he's incredibly stupid. He wants to know about houses he sold ten years ago."

Alan spoke rather sharply and turned his face away from Carol, leaving her to stare at his profile, the stubborn chin and smooth blond hair, and feeling nothing at his nearness. Nothing. . . . Yet today at the quarry the blurred figure of Norman had made her feel an electric awareness.

Later she said, "Perhaps you are Mr. Hartley's heir, Alan, and that's why he didn't ask you to draw up his will. He didn't want you to know. He's terribly fond of you and apparently you were the only person he felt he could trust with his affairs."

"Whatever gave you that idea, Carol? No, it—it couldn't be! It. . . ." Pressing his foot again on the accelerator, he gave another half laugh. "I'm afraid you're too optimistic. His will was drawn up before I took over his affairs, I believe."

"It was just an idea, that's all."

"It'll be an eccentric will. I told you that before. He'll probably leave everything for a park and swimming pool for the poor children in his neighborhood."

"I wouldn't call that eccentric. I'd call it—humane."

* * *

He took her home and they went to the garden in the rear of the house where Dr. Tallant was enjoying his pipe and the untroubled summer sky. Carol only vaguely heard the conversation of her father and Alan; her mind drifted, as always of late it was drifting, to Norman. To think of him brought him near, sitting beside her, speaking to her, laughing with her, teasing her, lifting her again to ecstatic heights never reached before. Dreams, so incredibly dear and clear, of places where they would never be together, and things they would never say to each other. They were the places he and Edwina would be together and the things they would say to each other.

When Alan spoke to her, she sat up quickly, thinking what good friends her father and Alan were and that her father's last big problem would be solved when he saw her safely married It was as futile to fight as it was to dream. The roots of her life had begun to grow with the roots of Alan's. They could not be pulled up or planted elsewhere.

In the presence of her father, Alan's good-night kiss was brief and hurried.

As she went into her house Dr Tallant asked, "Is everything all right, dear? We haven't seen much of each other lately. We must have one of our good talks soon."

"Yes, dear, we must." She thought: No, we mustn't. I've always been honest with you and now I cannot be honest.

* * *

As on many previous Saturday evenings, Edwina and Norman had been dancing at the country club When the crowd thinned they left and before long Norman's black car passed between the stone pillars and stopped in the driveway beside the great white house.

"Coming in, Norman? It's early and much too warm to sleep. I feel like a mouse alone in this house."

He smiled. "It's one o'clock. What about your reputation?"

"A man who cares about my good name? You are unique, darling. Come in. We'll dig up something to eat"

Her long white crepe dinner frock trailed the velvety grass as she led the way to the house. Never, she thought, as she opened the door and stepped into the vast hall, had she taken the beauty and richness of the house for granted. And more than ever recently had she felt a strong pride of possession. The library, filled with the fine books that Patrick Burke had never had time to read, and the dining room gleaming with silver, were dark. Throwing off the light blue wool coat, she went to the drawing room which, despite its luxurious furnishings, was strangely dominated by the portrait of Patrick Burke above the fireplace. When she opened the doors that led to the terrace, a breeze filtered through.

* * *

She had been impatient to leave the club, she had made her plans. Not much longer could she endure uncertainties and the accumulating bills that were gnawing her into panic-stricken helplessness and sleepless nights. She had learned patience and humility in her waiting and as the summer days went on, she had not swerved from her silent promise to do anything and everything to make Norman happy—if only he would marry her. Good companions they were at dancing and tennis and swimming, but Norman had not once overstepped the bounds of friendship. For the latter she admired him, knowing they had a foundation of friendship few could attain. But time was rushing by and her patience had worn to a line so fine that it was breaking.

He was taking a cigaret from a box on the low teakwood table when she went to him and looked up at him so appealingly that he changed his mind about the cigaret.

"Norman, in New York you said that if you kissed any girl this summer it would be I."

"Why play with dynamite when we've been having fun, Edwina? We haven't needed that to stimulate us."

"I'm a girl who's in love with you, and to a girl in love the fun we've had, the companionship — though it's been wonderful isn't—isn't quite enough, darling."

He stood there, frowning. "You love me, Edwina? Forgive me. I didn't know it. I swear I didn't know it!"

* * *

Hating the lie and afraid that she would cry out her plight to him, she swallowed hard and said, "Only once before have I been as honest as this. It isn't good technique, I know. A man still likes to be the hunter. You can't have any illusions about me. You've heard too much about me."

"On the contrary," he said seriously, "I've a lot of very small illusions about you, Edwina. You're the first real friend of your sex I've ever had. I value my friendships with men, men like Dick, for instance, but the friendship of a girl, of you, has been one of the most stimulating things that's ever happened to me. We've had fun. We've been honest. We've been wholesome. I don't care what you've done or what any one has said or is saying about you. I know you. I might have played at being in love with you and made love to you, but I thought we had something better. Again, forgive me. I knew you liked me but I thought I was sort of time-killer for you during your summer at home."

A time-killer! Merciful heaven!

* * *

He went on, concerned and serious, "I thought we were pretty sophisticated people, Edwina. If I've done or said anything to make you believe I've thought of you as anything more than a swell friend, I'm sorry. That's a thin 'out' for a man, isn't it? Just to say he's sorry. I didn't know. I swear I didn't know that you were in love with me"

She clutched at a straw. "Don't you ever intend to marry?" She walked away from him then and with her back to him she said, "I guess I'm not sophisticated. Love makes sophistication drop from you like an old, ragged garment. I've thought of us, the kind of wife I'd like to be to you, the life we could have together. I've thought that our companionship was the finest foundation possible."

"I—I went mad for a time, did mad, crazy things, because I was young and hurt and defiant and rich, and because I thought I could get away with it. I never want to go back to that sort of thing. I'm heartily sick of it." This part of it was true, she thought, so true. . . ." I'm behaving badly and this is very embarrassing to you, Norman. I leave you nothing to say except you're sorry you can't be in love with me."

"I wish I were. I wish I were. Marriage? I don't know. When the summer is over, maybe before it's over, I'm going back to take up where I left off. To me marriage has always been like the proverbial pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, something wonderful to hope for and win."

He went to her and put his hands on her shoulders. "Ed-wina, you flatter me more than I deserve. You make me feel that I don't recognize the pot of gold when it's being offered to me. Some people don't know when I'm serious and when I'm kidding. I've never been more serious in my life than I am now."

"You've said all the nice things. Thanks. And now, if you don't mind, I'd like to be alone."

"Sure you'd like to be alone?"

"Quite sure."

"I don't like to leave you feeling low like this."

She gave a low, husky chuckle. "I always fight things out best alone. I'm that sort of person. Please. . . ."

"If you say so. . . ."

She heard his cushioned footsteps as he left her and knew when he paused that he was glancing back at her. Then she heard him go out and presently the purr of the motor.

STOCKS RALLY ON TIDINGS OF BRITISH RAIDS

Traders Cheered by Fact R. A. F. Striking Back at Nazi Capital.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Wall Street traders today discounted a Berlin warning of intention to level London with a stock rally which sent war shares a point or so higher.

It was a cautious market with transactions slow, but the level of advances toward the fourth hour was near its best for the session.

High among the leaders were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Harvester, Westinghouse, Johns Manville and American Telephone.

Marketmen attributed the lift mainly to the Royal Air Force and its demonstration that Britain is striking back in the air at Germany.

Whether the United States' rapidly increasing production of war materials would be sufficient and speedy enough to bolster England's needs was under constant discussion in Wall street.

Included in the losing side of the market was Dow Chemical, which slipped more than 5 points at one time after the company announced an offering of new stock.

Followers of retail shares were cheered by an estimate that department store sales last week rose 17 per cent over the like 1939 period.

PLANE LOSSES

LONDON—(UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a radio speech today, said that German losses were three to one in the air battle over Britain.

"We are much stronger than when the hard fighting began in July," Churchill said. "If the air war goes on at the present rate it will wear down and ruin a vital part of the German air force."

ASHURST SLIPS IN SENATE RACE

Colorful Capital Figure Loses Arizona Vote; Vandenberg Wins Renomination.

ator from Arizona since the state's admission to the union in 1912.

Louisiana returns meanwhile indicated that four members of the house of representatives had gone down to defeat, with three others facing the uncertainty of run-off primaries. Gov. Sam Jones, elected last winter by the anti-Long forces, had urged the defeat of all eight incumbents as supporters of the Long organization. One did not seek renomination.

Besides renominating Senator Austin, Vermont Republicans picked Gov. George D. Aiken, frequent New Deal critic, for the senate vacancy resulting from the death of Senator Gibson (R.). Aiken won the short term nomination decisively over Ralph E. Flanders.

In gubernatorial contests, two well known figures were riding high.

Gov. Harold Stassen, keynoter of the Republican national convention, had a huge lead in Minnesota for renomination over two cirtics of his administration. Stassen's activity in behalf of the Republican presidential nominee, Wendell L. Willkie, was stressed in his campaign.

Michigan's octogenarian Gov. Lauren D. Dickinson, who got national attention some months ago when he condemned big city vice and the evils of liquor, was far out in front of six younger rivals.

The Republican gubernatorial race in New Hampshire ended in a photo-finish with Senate President Robert O. Blood apparently victor over national grange lecturer James C. Farmer.

Washington's electorate apparently has rejected Governor Clarence D. Martin's bid to become the state's first chief executive to win a third term.

Clarence C. Dill, former U. S. senator, led Gov. Martin for the Democratic nomination by more than 16,000 votes, and his margin was increasing today as returns came in from yesterday's blanket-primary, in which the voter could choose from the candidates of both parties.

Arthur B. Langlie, mayor of Seattle, won the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

In the contests for the successor to U. S. Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), recently appointed a federal judge, Rep. Monrad C. Wallgren won the Democratic nomination and Stephen F. Chadwick, ex-Democrat and past national commander of the American Legion, was the Republican choice.

500 TRAPPED IN LONDON SCHOOL BELIEVED DEAD

Only Few Rescued Alive From Debris; Hospitals Hit Throughout City.

of the new attack was clearly audible.

The population had a brief respite before the afternoon attack. All who could be spared from other duties had plunged into the task of attempting to clean up the indescribable mess left in the wake of last night's attack and lend assistance to the injured.

Even at the comparatively late afternoon hour when the onslaught came, no estimate was available of the lives lost or bodies maimed in last night's attack. The apparent loss of 500 lives in the single East End refugee shelter made it apparent, however, that these last 12 or 18 hours would be the worst that London has yet had to endure.

The new attack came as Londoners were cheering the Royal Air Force for last night's terrific attack on the center of Berlin, and everyone knew that this new raid was the reprisal.

After a lengthy period of quiet following the alarm, the sound of heavy bombing became audible. Then, at an altitude of approximately 12,000 feet, a fleet of bombers variously estimated at between thirty and fifty hove into sight, surrounded by the cotton wool of bursting anti-aircraft shells.

For several minutes, bombs dropped at an uncountable rate. They were so numerous that the explosions overlapped one another. It was virtually a continuous roar.

Roof-watchers saw R. A. F. fighters begin to split the Nazi formation into smaller groups and terrific dog-fighting took place in the midst of continued bombing.

At one period, the attack became so uncomfortable in the dead center of the capital that roof watchers scrambled to safety deep in basement shelters. The streets were emptied as though by magic, with only an occasional hardy soul peering out of a doorway.

One lone taxicab ambled down Fleet street toward the damaged St. Paul's Cathedral area, its driver seemingly unaware that a battle of major proportion was under way directly above him.

Despite the danger, it was difficult for correspondents like myself to withdraw from the rooftop of Chronicle house in Fleet street. The spectacle of myriad fast-flying machines, the sun glinting on their silver wings, was a fascinating one.

The smoke of anti-aircraft fire in a semi-circle in the sky clearly showed where the enemy was being driven round the city. London itself might have been an amphitheatre for some weird gladatorial battle being fought high in the clouds.

A brief air raid warning earlier this afternoon failed to deter rescue workers from their frantic efforts to reach possible survivors buried beneath the tangled ruins of the two-story east end school although hope was virtually abandoned that any more would be found alive.

Of the first 90 removed from the shattered debris only one person was alive. Soon after, however, rescuers reached two infants—one six months old and one nine months—and by a seeming miracle both were breathing.

The victims took shelter in the school building on Monday night after being evacuated from another east end district which had been badly hit.

One gigantic aerial torpedo struck the school squarely, smashing it to rubble instantly. Masonry and steel girders crumpled down upon the refugees.

The force of the explosion transformed streets in the vicinity into a mass of wreckage. The majority of the inhabitants escaped injury in air raid shelters but those in the school building had no chance.

after a fire in 1674 and in 1703, the last time by John Sheffield, the Duke of Buckingham. There have been many additions since then. The king's residence contains a priceless collection of paintings and other treasures. It has about 40 acres of gardens.

There was no serious structural damage done to the palace but flying glass and soot blown down the chimneys marred the walls and furniture of many rooms.

One side and part of the roof was torn off a Grecian style building housing the swimming pool.

The bomb fell only a few feet from the end of the pool, constructed in 1938, and made a crater 15 feet deep and 12 feet across.

Workmen today were picking up glass from green lawns, once the scene of famous garden parties. Others were cutting off water at a pool because because it was flooding a nearby engine room. But the electricity ,gas and water services at the palace were unimpaired and an air raid shelter beneath the pool was intact.

A party of British and American correspondents viewed the damage this morning.

No harm had been done to the gray stone facade of the palace in front, where red coated guards once performed the famous ceremony of "changing the guard."

O. S. R. Fugitives Face Two Charges At Millersburg

Charges of breaking and entering and auto theft were on file in Holmes county today against Ernest Hartman, 22, and Walter Splitt, 20, both of Akron who went over the wall at Ohio state reformatory 10 days ago.

The fugitives were surprised in their room at Alliance by Stark and Mahoning county officials yesterday, following a widespread search which began after the pair was routed in an attempt to burglarize a Millersburg feed store late Monday.

Two of the four who escaped at the same time from the Mansfield institution, Hartman and Splitt were reported to have been hiding out in Alliance for the past nine days.

They are charged with having taken an automobile belonging to Dr. Luther High, Millersburg, for use in their flight from the reformatory. Louis Hartman, who heads the citizens' committee.

While he would not reveal the name of the meter he favored the mayor indicated that he would recommend one of the lower priced manually operated types.

"On my tour of the Pittsburgh area," he related, "I found virtually all types working equally well. And the expensive ones looked no better than the others after they had been on the streets a few weeks."

Locke said he found all of the cities visited definitely approving the penny-nickel type and indicated that he would insist on meters of this kind for Mansfield. He said Mansfield would be one of the first cities in Ohio to be using the penny-nickel meters.

He said all companies which had submitted bids here offer this kind of meter as well as the type which uses only nickels.

The penny-nickel meters permit parking rental for less than one-hour periods.

"I intend to let other members of the group express their opinions first," the mayor said, "and I believe we can reach an agreement today."

Among the lower-priced meters which the mayor indicated he favored were those priced at $33.50 and $49.50 each installed. Five hundred of the meters will be leased for a nine-months' trial period.

BOMBS MENACE U. S. EMBASSY IN NAZI CITY

Enraged Germans Charge Foe Deliberately Aimed at Government Center.

was not sounded until 1:45 a. m.

A veritable rain of incendiaries, narrowly missing the American embassy, exploded around the Pariser Platz, where the French embassy building and Berlin's world-famed Adlon hotel are situated. They also fell on the Neue Wilhelmstrasse and the Kurfuerstendamm—Berlin's "Broadway."

The International News Service Berlin staff was forced to evacuate its office on Dorotheenstrasse for the time being because of a high-explosive time bomb which landed in the middle of the street only 40 yards away.

When the bomb was removed and danger of an explosion over, the staff was permitted to return to the office.

Four waves of British planes—totalling perhaps 20 machines—damaged the government section of Berlin. But the Wilhelmstrasse proper, by some apparent freak of fate, was untouched.

Angry Germans predicted, on the basis of official threats during the past few days that London's house of parliament, Whitehall and the famous Pall Mall now "face the prospect of bombs" in retaliation for the work of the RAF this morning.

Two official announcements were issued regarding the raid on Berlin. The first, in sarcastic phrases, stated:

"The RAF during the night again carefully avoided military objectives. Their attack was deliberate and carefully planned. The city was clearly visible under the star-lit sky and many flares were used."

"The Reichstag building, the Brandenburg gate and a number of apartment houses in the center of the city were hit.

"None of these objectives can be called military.

"The plan of fire and execution of the raids leads to the conclusion that the British supreme command had given explicit orders."

A later announcement revealed that the British also bombed other areas of Germany and German-occupied territory and stated that five persons were killed in Berlin and a few others injured. This statement said:

"Last night British planes again bombed non-military objectives in northern France, Belgium and Reich territory, concentrating their attacks on Belgium and Berlin.

"Numerous bombs were dropped on non-military objectives in Berlin proper and in the western section of the city.

"A number of fires broke out and damage was caused especially to hospitals, hotels and buildings which are known throughout the world as national monuments and national symbols. Business and residential sections also were dabaged."

The American embassy building was not damaged but it shook considerably under the concussion of exploding bombs. A. Dana Hodgdon, first secretary and consul and several members of the night staff were inside the building at the time.

Bomb splinters marked the building housing the International News Service at the corner of Dorotheenstrasse and Neue Wilhelm strasse, where bombs exploded and a delayed action missile fell.

Two explosives burst within 50 yards of the office, and in the lower part of the building windows were smashed, including the front windows of a candy shop and a beer hall.

The top floor of an adjacent building, the physical institute of Berlin university was set on fire. The fire brigade was summoned and the flames were quickly extinguished.

A German air force major who witnessed the raid from the Adlon hotel said waves of British raiders flew in from the west at heights varying from 10,000 to 18,000 feet and systematically threw down flares.

The major claimed that the British pilots thus must have had sufficient visibility to "aim definitely for targets in the government section."

German officials charged that some of the raiders, after releasing their bombs, attempted to machine-gun searchlight batteries.

Conferees Seek Quick Agreement on Draft Differences

MAPS PLAN TO REGISTER ALL FROM 21 TO 30

War Department Decides on Draft Steps While Waiting O. K. on Age Limit.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Although congressional agreement was still in abeyance on conscription age limits, the war department has made plans, it was disclosed today, to register men from 21 through 30 years old as a separate group in event the broader 21-through-44 age bracket eventually receives approval.

The war department's decision was said to be in the interest of minimizing delay on the actual start of the compulsory military service program, once the Burke-Wadsworth legislation becomes law.

The age question continued the major problem today, as the joint senate-house conference committee renewed its efforts to compose the differences occurring in the varying drafts of the Burke-Wadsworth bill voted by the two chambers. The committee reached agreement on some minor points yesterday in a six-hour session lasting until after the dinner hour.

House conferees were to give their answer to a compromise proposal by senate members for fixing the upper age limit at 39, instead of the 44-year maximum previously approved by house vote.

The senate version of the measure called for registration of all men from 21 through 30 years old, but the house upped this to include all from 21 through 44.

Defer Decision.

Chairman Sheppard (D., Tex.) of the senate military committee said the senate conferees offered to compromise on a provision to include men from 21 through 39, but house members wanted to defer decision overnight.

With senate conferees thus giving way on the age dispute, some members said there were indications that the house's 21-44 age bracket finally could prevail.

In this connection, Rep. Wadsworth (R., N. Y.), co-author of the bill but not a conferee, told reporters it was his understanding that if the broader age range was approved, the war department planned to register the men affected in two groups and on separate days.

The approximately 12,000,000 men from 21 through 30 would be registered first, it was understood, so that their cards might be classified and trainees selected without the complications which would arise in sorting 12,000,000 additional cards to be filled out later by men from 31 through 44.

With a decision believed near on the age question, Sheppard said no appreciable progress had been made by the joint committee on the second important controversial point—the house amendment deferring conscription for 60 days while attempts were made to fill the army's initial quota of 400,000 men by voluntary enlistments.

He predicted, however, that agreement might be reached late in the day.

WARNS BRITISH INVASION LOOMS

Churchill Warns Britain of Anticipated Nazi Drive Within Week.

"Preparations also are being made to carry an invading force from Norwegian harbors. Behind these ship preparations are a very large number of German troops awaiting orders to set out on their very dangerous trip across the seas.

"We cannot say when they will try to come. We cannot say that they may come at all.

"But no one can blind himself to the fact that invasion of this island is being prepared for with all German thoroughness and may come at any time.

"If it is tried at all, it does not seem it can be long delayed. The weather may break at any time. Besides this, it is difficult for the enemy to keep these gathering ships waiting about indefinitely while being bombed by our planes and warships.

"Therefore we must regard the next week or so very important in our history. It ranks with the days of the Spanish Armada or the day when Nelson stood between us and the armies of Napoleon at Boulogne.

"Every man and woman must therefore prepare to do his or her duty, whatever it may be, with special pride and care.

"Our fleet is very powerful and our air force at the highest pitch it has ever achieved. Our shores are well fortified and strongly manned.

"We are prepared to fight in every village and every street. It is with confidence I say: 'Let God determine the right.'"

Churchill said that by the furious raids on London Hitler is trying to "terrorize and cow the people of this great city and thus distract our attention unduly from the preparation for invasion."

"Little does he know the spirit of the British people," the prime minister declared.

Churchill said Hitler's objective had backfired, and would produce just the opposite effect, stating:

"This wicked man, this monster, product of former wrongs and shames, is trying to wipe out our race by indiscriminate slaughter.

"What he has done has been to kindle a fire in British hearts which will grow long after the conflagration he has started. He has started a fire which will burn with steady, consuming flames until the last of German tyranny is wiped out.

"This is a measure of good cheer to our fighting forces on sea, land and in the air to hold their posts and stations. They know they have behind them people who will not flinch or weary of the struggle, hard or protracted though it may be. Rather that we will draw from the struggle itself the means for survival and victory."

Germany is using up its fighter force "at a very high rate," Churchill said, and if attacks on England continue "Hitler will wear down and ruin the best and vital part of his air force."

The barges being prepared for the invasion, the prime minister said, are "self-propelled" and are moving down the coasts of Europe from the German and Dutch harbors "to the ports of northern France from Dunkirk to Brest and beyond Brest to the great harbor in the Bay of Biscay."

The Germans, Churchill said, may try to invade England, Scotland or Ireland—or perhaps all three.

"Therefore," he said, "we must regard the next week or so as a very important week for us in our history. As great as the days when the Spanish armada was approaching the Channel and Drake was finishing his game of bowls, or when Nelson stepped between us and Napoleon's grand army at Boulogne.

"We have read about the English in the history books. But what is happening now is on a far greater scale, and of far more consequence to the life and future of the world and its civilization than those brave old days of the past."

PLAN ROUND TABLE TALKS

Phalanx Officers Decide to Redecorate Club Rooms.

A round table discussion will be held at the first fall meeting of the Phalanx fraternity at 8:30 p. m. Thursday in the Y. M. C. A., Robert Stone, president, announced today.

Officers of the fraternity, meeting last night, decided to redecorate club romos for the fraternity on the second floor of the Y. M. C. A., Stone said.

The annual Halloween party and a fall and winter program were also discussed by officers.

LASHES WILLKIE AT DEM MEET

Ravenna Judge Addresses 225 Precinct Workers at Tuesday Meeting.

Lashing at Republican presidential nominee Wendell L. Willkie as an inexperienced politician "in a class with Zachary Taylor and Ulysses S. Grant," Judge David L. Rockwell, Ravenna, last night canvassed the state and national political scene for about 225 Democratic party workers in a meeting at the court of appeals room in the court house.

Atty. Marshall C. Moore presided at the meeting and local Democratic candidates spoke briefly.

Representatives from all the county precincts heard Judge Rockwell recall that he acted as toastmaster at an Akron banquet where Willkie made his first political speech.

He said Willkie had approached him at that time and asked to be permitted to work in behalf of the Democratic party which he later left.

Judge Rockwell also praised the record of former governor Martin L. Davey.

'Visiting Cards' Dropped by R. A. F.

(By Associated Press)

Britain's volcanic "visiting cards," strewn by the millions on Germany, constitute the first authentic new or "secret" weapon displayed in more than a year of the European war.

The British acknowledge the existence and purpose of the cards, but are silent on technical details. They have, however, let the British Broadcasting company transmit Germany's angered description of the little bits of paper.

The cards, about two inches square, are made of phosporous and guncotton and are carried in damp packages in British bombers, the Germans assert.

One plane can carry as many as a quarter-million of them.

Scattered over the countryside, they dry out and burst into flames—a persistent little fire eight inches high.

The British say that the cards are effective in setting fire to munitions, supplies in open trucks, and in routing Germans out of hideouts in the woods.

That they are effective is indicated by the German complaint that farmhouses, barns, crops in the fields, and forests have been burned and that many persons have suffered injuries from picking them up for souvenirs.

This last suggests that possibly there is printed mater on them.

The British deny a German charge that the cards are poisonous, but acknowledge that they will burn anyone picking them up.

UNIONS PLAN BATTLE OVER DEFENSE WORK

AFL and CIO Draw Lines For Show Down Fight at New Ravenna Plant.

(By United Press)

CLEVELAND — Lines were drawn today for a show down fight between American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, building trades union over sharing of work in construction of the $14,000,000 munitions loading plant near Ravenna.

The United Construction Workers Union (CIO) was engaged in an organizing drive among nonunion craftsmen near Ravenna. The union announced "the AFL need no longer consider these major projects its private property.

The CIO union said it would insist that workers on the munitions factory job be hired "without discrimination because of their union affiliation."

Replying to the demand, Albert Dalton, business representative of the AFL Building Trades Council in Cleveland, said:

"The Ravenna project is one job on which the CIO won't work a man. They can organize all they want to but this job will be 100 per cent AFL."

O. B. Allen, local organizing director for the CIO union, said the CIO "expected AFL opposition." He said that AFL couldn't supply all the men for the Ravenna job without bringing them in from other cities.

"We don't intend to tolerate this, when plenty of CIO men from Cleveland, Akron and Youngstown will be able to take up the slack," he added.

"The CIO will insist that the men hired on the Ravenna job be signed up in the order in which they applied for work, whether AFL or CIO, we dont want to hog the job, but we do demand an equal break."

Dalton asserted that any talk of a shortage of AFL mechanics was a "myth" and that preparations already had been mde to supply all of the men needed without creating a labor shortage on residential and industrial building projects in greater Cleveland.

The Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co., which will build the new plant, works under AFL closed shop contracts, Dalton said.

BELLVILLE FAIR OPENS TONIGHT

2,800 Entries Received For Premiums of Over $1,000; Free Acts Booked.

BELLVILLE — With banners flying and flags waving, the annual Bellville street fair is all set for its formal opening tonight at 7:30.

In spite of a poor crop year, a near record number of entries have been received, and exhibits are all in place. The 2,800 entries reported by the fair board equal those of two years ago when Bellville had its biggest fair, and surpasses last year's entries by 500. Exhibitors are vying for more than $1,000 in premiums.

The 4-day fair conducted by the Bellville Independent Agricultural society, will have free band concerts and free acts by Pop Farver's Jamboree Gang each afternoon and evening. There will also be platform dancing each evening.

Special events include judging of exhibits Thursday morning, a colt show Friday at 1:30 p. m. and the Bellville-LaRue high school football game Friday at 3 p. m. and a baseball game Saturday afternoon.

Attendance in recent years has averaged about 8,000 nightly, and the fair board anticipates similar crowds this year. Russell Walker is president of the board and E. O. Kochheiser secretary. Mansfield residents have made up a large part of the crowds in the past and undoubtedly will be attracted by this year's exposition.

Silhouette for 1941

Buick SPECIAL 6-passenger 4-door Sedan, $1052 delivered at Flint, Mich. Wheel shields and white sidewall tires, extra.★

As surely as the new Buick FIREBALL* straight-eight engine sets the performance pace for the coming season, the graceful silhouette of the new Buick SPECIAL and CENTURY cuts the automotive style pattern for another half decade.

The reason is not alone the grace of its Buick-created lines, nor the appearance of solid substance in action that gives this honey the look of a speedster straining at its leash.

It is the practical quality of great room enclosed in sleek and flowing lines—more room for legs, for elbows, for heads, more room for entrance and more room for carrying luggage—that makes this the silhouette the cars of the future will seek to achieve.

Why wait for that—when in this Buick you travel in a car that, like time and tide, obviously isn't waiting for any man?

*According to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, a super meteor which travels with a series of explosions like the shock waves of a great projectile is called a "FIREBALL."

Maine Continues Republican

WHILE Maine's Republicanism is as much to be taken for granted as Mississippi's Democracy, the axiom, "As goes Maine so goes the nation," has been pretty much shot to pieces on a number of occasions.

Being the only state which elects state officials and a senator a couple of months ahead of the national election, Maine has been looked to for a hint of changing sentiment and Monday's results will probably be heralded by Republicans as evidence of a trend away from Roosevelt while Democrats will interpret the outcome as no more than normal Republican voting on state issues.

The fact remains, however, that while in 1936 Landon carried Maine by only 42,000 in the total of approximately 300,000 votes cast, last Monday's much lighter voting gave Republican majorities of 70,000 for governor and 45,000 for senator.

Since Maine has lost its questionable prestige as a forecaster of national results it may be wondered why the state legislature continues to resist efforts to make the state election conform to the November election date, as is practiced by all other states, with probable saving of expense—but maybe Maine prides itself on being different.

Time To Pay Forty Cents

UNDER the provisions of Ohio's ineffective drivers' license law, now is the time for annual renewal of licenses by all persons who drive a car.

The requirement for a driver's license in Ohio is 40 cents. In some states there are such additional requirements as sobriety, ability to drive, physical competency and mental normalcy—but not in Ohio. All that is necessary in Ohio is to have 40 cents.

As the Cleveland Plain Dealer commented editorially on this subject: "Anyone willing to lie about his physical condition or his experience behind a wheel, or anyone who is ignorant of his own defects as a driver, can get a license."

Frequency with which drunken drivers are involved in traffic accidents evidences the ease with which habitual drinkers can secure and retain drivers' licenses.

The Plain Dealer suggests, regarding the present license law: "Either it should be wiped from the statute books, or it should be strengthened so that no license is issued except after thorough examination of the applicant. Those who issue the licenses should be paid a salary by the state so that their income in no way depends on the number issued."

The drivers' license law should NOT be "wiped from the statute books"—IT SHOULD BE MADE EFFECTIVE in keeping reckless, incompetent, drunken and sub-normal drivers off of streets and highways.

Stop! Look! Think!

BETWEEN the World war and the outbreak of the present war, there was a steady output of books about international affairs. Almost every writer who mentioned the subject insisted that if another war came to Europe it was bound to be a world war and the United States couldn't stay out even if it wanted to. And many believed them.

With that fearful conviction widely accepted, Americans watched the developments of the summer of 1939 with acute interest. When the British and French declarations of war against Germany finally came, most Americans probably thought our early entry was inevitable.

Then a reaction occurred in public opinion. Voices were heard saying not only that we could stay out, but that we must stay out. Our greatest chance to serve civilization, preserve democracy and restore a shattered Europe lay in our remaining at peace. Most important, we began to feel that we could decide our course for ourselves.

Today the talk of entering the war in heard again. Depending on the speaker's point of view, we are "being tricked into it by Great Britain," "pushed in by a clique in our own country," "forced in by the trend of events." Whether this talk represents merely a pendulum swing of public opinion, or whether it comes with dawning recognition of the world-revolutionary character of the war, perhaps no one is yet competent to say. It is important, however, that thoughtful Americans weigh such talk, study its source and purpose, and finally do whatever they do calmly and intelligently, with eyes open and minds clear.

Argentina's Feelings Hurt

WILLIAM F. McDERMOTT, American newspaper man now getting acquainted with South America, finds that Argentina's [illegible] against the United States is largely a sentimental matter. The nation's pride has been wounded.

As a matter of fact, this country is Argentina's second best customer, only Great Britain buying more there than we do. Our importations include corn, wool and linseed. We are the principal support of their linseed industry.

None of that counts, however, since we have excluded their beef because of the hoof and mouth disease among Argentine herds. England doesn't worry about that because cattle in the British Isles also have it. That reason looms larger to Argentines than the fact our own cattle growers and meat packers are naturally [illegible] opposed to the competition of Argentine beef.

Travelers, including [illegible] on the subject, all say that [illegible] Argentina are the most delicious in the world.

The point is, that Argentine feelings have been hurt as were Japanese feelings by the special Japanese exclusion clause in our immigration act of 1924. In each case, tact and diplomatic treatment of difficult issues might have reduced hard feelings, or might still do so.

Hands Off!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

OLD JULIA SHANE lay dying. Already the world in which she had spent so many powerful years was fading, becoming unreal. She had seen many things in those years. She had become wise and shrewd and more than a little feared. But now she was looking back at it all curiously, as a stranger might look.

What a solitary business life was, after all. So many people walking along together, side by side—working, playing, loving, hating each other, thinking they belonged to each other—yet never actually knowing each other never wholly revealing themselves to each other! In all her years, this was the deepest truth she had learned. Her graying lips fumbled at the mystery of it.

"Every one of us is different from the others" she whispered. "There are no two in the least alike and no one ever really knows any one else. There is always a part which remains secret and hidden concealed in the deepest part of the soul.

"No husband ever knows his wife, and no wife ever really knows her husband. There is always something just beyond that remains aloof and untouched, mysterious and indiscoverable, because we ourselves do not know just what it is. Sometimes it is shameful. Sometimes it is too fine, too precious ever to reveal. It is quite beyond revelation even if we chose to reveal it."

"No one ever really knows anyone else." . . . Louis Bromfield put those words, and old Julia Shane, in his book "The Green Bay Tree." And there's enough wisdom in them for ten volumes.

All of us strangers, no matter how closely we may be bound by blood or association. Sounds rather dismal at first glance, doesn't it? Yet our lives would be completely revolutionized and glorified if we would accept that truth and act upon it. Most of our human misery comes because we don't and won't!

We're so complacently sure that we know all about our intimates and have a perfect right to set their lives in order if we don't approve of them. As a consequence, we treat them with a rudeness we'd never dare show a tramp. We not only expect them to share our opinions and conform to our code, but we are outraged if they don't.

And the closer the tie, the more the meddling, the tighter the strangle-hold. Well, why not? Don't we love each other? Aren't we part of the same family? Haven't we been close friends for years 'n' years? Then why on earth should they be so secretive, keep things to themselves? They must be up to something, trying to hide something they oughtta be ashamed of!

IT DOESN'T OCCUR TO US THAT THE OTHER FELLOW HAS AS MUCH RIGHT TO HIS UNIQUE AND PRIVATE PATTERN AS WE OURSELVES HAVE, AND THAT NO BOND ON EARTH GIVES US THE LICENSE TO PRY INTO OR TRY TO POSSESS THAT SECRET SELF. NO WONDER "FAMILIARITY BREEDS CONTEMPT" . . . AND LOVE SOON BECOMES AS STALE AS LAST WEEK'S RICE PUDDING.

On the other hand, we usually put on our Company Manners for strangers. We respect their privacy, accept their opinions, refrain from criticism and judgment. Indeed, their very differences usually add to their charm. There is a mystery about that difference that is both exciting and refreshing. We honor that mystery.

WHAT AN AMAZING CHANGE THERE'D BE IF WE'D USE A LITTLE OF THAT HONORING, RESPECTING, AND REFRAINING ON OUR BEST BELOVEDS!

No. 1 School Aid Is Good Health.

—By DR. CLENDENING

THE success of a child in school is based on his physical soundness. Our whole system of education is based on seeing and hearing. A child with a considerable degree of failure in vision or hearing may have got by during his young years of play, but these become serious handicaps when he enters school. The defect may be entirely unsuspected. In one community in one year 66,000 children were found to have defective vision and 17,000 defective hearing.

Other defects while not so disabling should receive consideration. This child who is a mouth-breather and is subject to chronic colds cannot concentrate as successfully as his healthy schoolmates.

At this time of year the nose and throat surgeons are busily engaged in working on adenoids and tonsils so as to correct the defects resulting from mouth breathing.

The teeth should be examined and put in good condition—mouth breathing may result in bad occlusion of the teeth and malformed teeth may tend to keep a child a mouth-breather. Eleven per cent of children are found to be either mouth-breathers or to have abscessed teeth, the first year they enter school.

Undernourishment Common.

All the defects mentioned are of a remediable nature and need not hamper a child's progress forever.

Undernourishment is found in a greater or less degree in nearly a third of all first year school children. In most cases this is due to ignorance of the use of protective foods at home. It is so easy nowadays to get in the habit of eating processed foods, especially in a household where the cook and housekeeper goes to town to work, as well.

School teachers tell one that hundreds of children come to school having had an insufficient breakfast or one that represents internal starvation because mother and father both had to rush off to work. To provide breakfast out of a can or a box is much easier than getting fresh milk, fresh fruit, an egg and a good cooked cereal.

Posture is an indication of good health or bad health rather than a disease in itself. It may mean poor nourishment, the residue of rickets earlier, weak muscles from undernutrition or bad postural habits.

Schools have found an awakening conscience in these conditions in their pupils. They have a responsibility for the physical as well as [illegible] rehabilitation of their pupils.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Revised Stand On Industry Draft; French Favor Return of Bullitt

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It was Senator Arthur Vandenberg, a rival for the presidential nomination, who had a big hand in Wendell Willkie's abrupt shift on the "draft industry" issue.

Vandenberg himself voted against the Russell-Overton amendment, but on the entirely consistent ground that he was opposed to conscripting both men and property. He was dismayed, therefore, when Willkie blasted the conscript industry amendment, after endorsing the conscription of men.

Previously, Vandenberg had tried to get over his isolationist views to Willkie—unsuccessfullly. So this time he wrote Willkie saying frankly that he thought he had made a mistake, which brought an invitation to come to Rushville for a personal talk.

Before leaving Washington, Vandenberg told Republican colleagues he intended to advise Willkie to climb off the shaky limb on which he had got himself. They authorized the Michigan senator to say that they agreed heartily. So in the two and a half hours he was closeted with Willkie, Van delivered the message with some straight-from-the-shoulder words of his own.

Six hours later, after Vandenberg had departed, Willkie issued the statement revising his stand.

Roosevelt's Horoscope.

THE White House has received an astrologer's forecast about the election. Unsolicited, this forecast gives "an interpretation of Mr. Roosevelt's horoscope" to the effect that "he cannot help but be elected." Also, "Mr. Willkie's horoscope is spotty, and not strong enough to hold up against Mr. Roosevelt's strong planet."

The astrologer is Mrs. Julia S. Hotchkiss of Westport, Conn. She throws in for good measure the prophecy that Germany will be defeated between January and April, 1941, by England, Turkey, Russia, the Balkans, and indirectly the United States.

* * *

French Politics.

THE French ambassador has received instructions from Vichy to present a demarche urging the return of Bill Bullitt as ambassador to France. He has not yet presented the demarche, and probably will leave this little task to his successor, Henri Haye, who is a great personal friend of Bullitt's.

Reason for the French desire to have Bullitt back is that they realize they cannot be enemies of Britain and friends with the United States at the same time, and they want to heal the diplomatic breach with the United States.

One important reason for this is to get food to France. With Bullitt in Vichy, they at least can represent their viewpoint.

Another purpose might be to resume diplomatic relations with Britain. The British are willing to negotiate any time the French take the initiative, and Bullitt might be the intermediary.

Note — What happens to food brought to France is illustrated by the disposal of a shipload of 8,000 sheep obtained from Northern Africa. When they arrived at a French port, 5,000 of them were appropriated by the Germans and Italians.

* * *

Draft Administrator.

GOVERNOR LLOYD STARK of Missouri, defeated last month in a primary attempt to unseat Senator Harry Truman, is angling for appointment as draft administrator, a new office created by the conscription act.

A World war veteran and successful business man and farmer, Stark is on close terms with the White House. With his senatorial hopes dashed by a narrow margin and his term as governor expiring this year, Stark is anxious to remain in public life and is pulling wires to land the compulsory training job.

However, he is up against two tough hurdles—Truman and Bennett Clark.

The two Missouri senators have let it be known privately that they will raise personal objections to Stark's confirmation if he is named draft administrator. Clark is anti-New Deal, but Truman has a 100 per cent administration record and Roosevelt is not likely to rebuff him by appointing his enemy.

Note — Colonel William ("Wild Bill") Donovan, World war hero and 1934 GOP candidate for governor of New York, has been sounded out on the draft administrator post but indicated he did not want a desk job. He intends to return to active military service.

* * *

Hatched and Unhatched.

THE "No Politics" sign has been hung up for the 100 odd business executives who are $1-a-year officials of the Defense Commission.

In a confidential legal memorandum written by Blackwell Smith, acting general counsel of the commission, the business men are warned that they come under the Hatch act and engaging in the campaign is taboo. If they want to go political, they will have to quit their federal jobs.

While this red light was being flashed on the defense officials, the green signal has been given U. S. ambassadors and ministers. There is nothing in the law barring them from campaigning, and they can take the stump—provided they get the okay of their boss, Secretary of State Hull.

Ambassador William Bullitt, whose recent Independence Square broadcast stirred a hornet's nest of isolationist outcry, plans to make a number of others on foreign policy. Bullitt has received more than 25,000 letters on his address, and is now busy expanding his Philadelphia speech into a book, which will be rushed into print.

Bill Green Rebuff.

REPRESENTATIVE Abe Murdock's smashing primary triumph in Utah was double-barreled. Besides unseating veteran anti-New Deal Senator William King, Murdock also administered a spanking to AFL President William Green.

In the closing days of the hot election, Green suddenly leaped into the fray with a letter to King, on official AFL letterhead, warmly endorsing him as a "genuine friend of the American Federation of Labor." King made much of this, reproducing the letter throughout the state in large newspaper advertisements.

Murdock is a member of the house committee investiagting the National Labor Relations board, where he vigorously opposed AFL proposals to axe the agency. So he countered with a coup of his own. He made public a "My Dear Abe" letter from Roosevelt.

The president did not put the hand on Murdock in so many words, but made it clear that he liked him and considered him a very important lieutenant. Making the most of the message, Murdock published it in big ads captioned, "Elect Roosevelt's Friend U. S. Senator."

What Murdock didn't know was that Senator King tried to get just such a letter and failed.

Before going out to Utah, King called on the president, and despite a long and bitter record of anti-New Deal warring, asked him for an endorsement. When Roosevelt shook his head, King then proposed a "friendly little letter." But the president smiled and said, "Sorry, Will. Not this time."

Note — Despite Green's letter and the fact that the CIO endorsed Murdock, AFL leaders in Utah campaigned for him openly.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—If there was a moon over Mulberry street the other night there was blood on it. They got Louie. Now there is only Joe. Joe is the last of the Reggione boys. There used to be seven. But two are in jail, and one is in a government veterans' hospital, and, with the exception of Joe, all the others are dead, shot down by gangsters. They got Mike up in Harlem, when he was only 19. And they shot James in West Broadway, down near its intersection with Houston street. And finally they got Louie. They got him good. "Shot 'im down like a dawg, in the gutter," the cabby said. "Shot'm under the heart. Shot 'im twice. He never knowed what hit 'em."

* * *

MULBERRY street is a little different from most of the other streets in New York. Its very name connotes violence and dealings outside the law. Several years ago there was a pleasant, harmless little play on Broadway called "Moon Over Mulberry Street." It made a few people happy. That was a good thing. It is the only time, at least the only time I know about, that the name Mulberry street has ever meant anything except a proving ground for mobsters. There are some fine old restaurants in the neighborhood. Papa Moneta's for instance, where the late O. O. McIntyre used to go occasionally. But mostly Mulberry street was the chosen background for some of the choicest murders of the dry years. Moe the Wart and Joe the Twirp got theirs there. They got it good. Moe was garroted. Joe had his head beaten in with a jimmy.

The other night the remaining Reggione boys, Louie and Joe, got out of a cab at No. 282. That's where their flat is. As they turned from the curb there came a sudden and terrible blast of pistol fire. Louie never knew what struck him. He turned and slowly spun as he fell like a crazy dancer. They tried to get Joe too. But Joe, sensing danger, simply vanished. The bullets that were sent after him ripped through the windowpanes of the neighborhood stores, and buried themselves into the lampposts. But they never touched Joe. . . . "It's hard to hit a man with a revolver on a dark, rain-swept night," the police decided later.

* * *

SO JOE is still alive somewhere. Meanwhile Pat Reggione is serving his stretch of from 10 to 20 years at Fairfield, Conn., and Tommy is doing a similar stretch in Sing Sing. It's Johnny who is the patient in the government's veterans' hospital.

Later as was inevitable, the police went over to have a talk with one of Joe's sisters. Joe has two sisters, both married.

"It's a vendetta," she cried. "Somebody has sworn to kill us all. Oh, God, who is going to be next?"

Well, I told you Mulberry street was a little different.

Grab Bag

One-Minute Test.

1. How long have ice skates been used?
2. What is civil death?
3. Are there locks in the Suez canal?

Hints on Etiquette.

One fold should be left in the dinner napkin when it is unfolded on your lap at dinner.

Words of Wisdom.

The true way to gain much, is never to desire to gain too much. —He is not rich that possesses much, but he that covets no more, and he is not poor that enjoys little, but he that wants too much.—Beaumont.

One-Minute Test Answers.

1. Since the 10th or 11th century, when they were mentioned in the Icelandic Edda, and crude skates are shown even earlier in carvings.
2. It is a legal term applied to persons who, on account of crime, have been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment, thereby losing all civil rights—they are dead in law.
3. No, because the canal is at sea level.

A Farmer's Diary

Just Jottings

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

EARLY every morning I notice the brilliant scarlet zinnia that blooms in front of the dewy asparagus bush. It is never so beautiful any other time. . . . Our three younger boys make stairsteps when they stand side by side. Even the toddler, not a year old, comes to his brother's shoulder . . .

Elderberry bushes are pretty twice a year. Once when they are white with bloom and again now when they droop with heavy dark purple clusters. Up by a spring in a neighboring field I came upon several bushes, gorgeous and undusted. I brought a few berries home for jelly . . . Our neighbor who is plowing with his red rubber-tired tractor rides and pets it like a broncho, —but it sounds like an airplane. . . . Tiny frogs play hide and seek among yellow, pink and white pond lilies in our pond . . .

Another hen has adopted the orphan chicks whose mother was killed on the road. I supposed they were dead long ago, but five out of six are still alive and growing tail feathers already. The foster mother goes with them to the same old nesting place where they were hatched.

The gray kitten met an untimely end and lay a corpse. I wondered which little boy would dispose of the carcass. The five-year-old did it, and buried pussy in a scooped-out hole in the newly plowed wheat ground. Then he came in, and got the soap. "I had to pull it's tail to get it on the spot," he explained. "I better wash."

There is something bold and beautiful about a big bull thistle in full bloom . . . A kitchen smells so good at canning time I'm sorry my wife has lost her recipe for chunk pickles . . . Thanks to our friends and critics for their letters. Someone has said, "The voyage of the best ship is a zigzag line of a hundred tacks." . . . "It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude." . . . Emerson.

With MARIANNE

THERE'S something about a dress you fashion for yourself that makes you kind of proud, isn't there? Well, with the lovely materials and trimmings that are being shown in the downtown stores now, your sewing this season should prove to be more of a delight and success than ever. . . . Corduroy has returned to popularity this fall for the first time in a long while, and it can be purchased in beige, red, wine, black, brown and navy blue. . . . Velveteen is proving to be another favorite, and it comes in the above mentioned shades, as well as soft rose and blue. . . . If you're all set to make a woolen dress, you'll be delighted with the sheer woolens, because many of them are almost as fine as crepe, and the rabbits' hair materials are pretty too—these come in shades of blue, rose, moss green and dubonnet. . . . Silks in new weaves are featured in all the fall shades (including carmel tan and vineyard), and for formal gowns, nothing would be more striking than debonese taffeta in high tones of raspberry rose, exotic blue and rhumba rose. . . . Oh yes, and the newest coat material is on the needle-point order, and they're showing it in brown, wine, black and basque (a blue-green).

Marianne

Now when it comes to trimming the dress you've made, you'll find all kinds of attractive buttons to help you out. . . . There are star-shaped crystal studs in red, white and blue, as well as enameled American flag studs . . . And then of course, military metal buttons in gold and silver are very much in evidence, as are a variety of styles of wooden and leather ones. . . . Plain dresses can take on a lot of style with the right kind of costume jewelry at the neckline—and with all that's on display in the local shops just now, that shouldn't be hard to find. . . . Sparkling rope braid necklaces combining strands of gold, silver and copper can be worn on most any color gown, as can the new amber bead necklaces and the strands of pearls

* * *

After you've seen one of the new velveteen suits, you won't be satisfied with your fall wardrobe if you don't have one. . . . They come in warm autumn shades of dubonnet, green and brown in a variety of styles. . . . Some single- and double-breasted models close with silver buttons, while others have buttons in the same shades as the suits. . . . The graceful skirts are many gored, and some of the features are Peter Pan collars and belted backs. . . . Satin blouses in white, soft rose or pale blue will add just the right note to any of these suits.

* * *

NO MATTER what you have in your fall wardrobe you'll want the right shade of make-up to go with it, and the new tones of Toujours Moi powder are as lovely as their scent. . . . Rachel, Rachel Fonce and Sport Tan are the most flattering ones, and they're even prettier when combined with the Toujours Moi lipstick in Stardust Pink, Spark Red and Sunset Medium tones.

* * *

Another new fall make-up shade is Mapleleaf Red, just introduced by one of the leading women cosmetic manufacturers. It is a warm red-brown and comes in rouge and lipstick . . . And say, something revolutionary in cream rouge is the new cheek stick—a rouge which is in a lipstick tube . . . It is made by a popular nail polish manufacturer, who recently introduced lipstick to match his polishes, and now he has brought out this cheek stick in six harmonizing tones—and it's so wonderfully creamy that it smooths on with a most natural glow.

* * *

A PLEASANT new cologne ensemble is "Pink Party"—a fragrance designed especially for the school girl. It is a blend of many flower scents—and consequently quite delicate and wistful. There's perfume, cologne, bath powder and soap, talc and cologne—as well as lipstick (in "spitfire," "redcap red" and "party pink") and face powder (in "peachy cream," "pinky beige" and "rosy tan"). All of the packages will delight any dressing table as they're pink, of course, and are decorated with scroll work and the motif of a young girl's head and a dance program.

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p. m.—Canal 1251.

Recent Brides, Girls To Wed Honored At Nuptial Events

ANOTHER in the series of post-nuptial parties honoring Mrs. Jennings Heiser, the former Miss Virginia Rimmer, was given yesterday evening by Miss Lucille Darling and Miss Doris Bush at the latter's home, 39 Vennum avenue.

The guests played hearts during the evening, and prizes were won by Mrs. Robert Wingert and Mrs. Duane Darling, who presented them to the honoree. When luncheon was served, the guests were seated at a long table, centered with a large sprinkling can filled with garden flowers. Smaller sprinkling cans marked the individual places, while pastel ribbons lead from the center one to a note at Mrs. Heiser's place, directing her to the hiding place of the kitchen shower gifts.

Mrs. Richard Wagner of Mt. Gilead was an out-of-town guest in attendance and she will be the associate hostess at a party for Mrs. Heiser Saturday evening. This affair will be given at the home of Miss [illegible] [illegible], with Mrs. Charles Atwell of Pittsburgh, Pa., also assisting.

Miss [illegible] [illegible] Stuhldreher was entertained with a shower at the home of Miss Ann Zegolia, Beymiller street, last night. Prizes in the games were won by Misses Florence Kleshinski and Ruth Clerice, who presented them to the honoree. Pink and blue formed the table color scheme when luncheon was served later, and Miss Clerice received a gift of crystal from the hostess.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, September 12.

Romance and affectional matters rule this day judging by the lunar and mutal configurations. It is probable that this felicitous situation may be intriguing or under cover. But discretion is admonished, as there might be lurking dangers from circumspection. Social, domestic and artistic engagements take precedence over business. There may be some opposition from superiors, employers or elders. However, the mental faculties may be keyed up to meet all situations.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year in which the social, domestic and sentimental are uppermost, with business in the background. Be circumspect in managing all affairs of a romantic nature. Employers or superiors may offer some opposition. The mind may be keyed up to originality and creative ability.

A child born on this day will have splendid mentality, with originality if not genius in creative work. It will be adventurous and novel in its thinking.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"None of that 'try' business," Lillian said truculently. "Katrina and I know your soft-heartedness—we ought to call it soft-headedness, and what a prize sap you'd be, if Ede turned on the wail of wanting to see you alone before she died, and we are a self-constituted committee to see that you behave yourself. And we're going to arrogate to ourselves the high-justice, the middle, and the low, so if you don't fancy being hanged, drawn and quartered you'd better be something more than 'reasonable.' Don't you subscribe to that, Katrina?"

"To the last dot on the 'i,' and the final cross of the 't,'" Katherine answered. Then she sent an appraising glance around the library.

"There's nothing more to be done here, is there?" she asked.

"No, everything is in readiness" I told her.

"And so is your little study," she said. "I made up the beds myself in there, and saw to it that everything is as near hospital convenience for Miss Whitlock as it can be managed. She'll bring her own equipment, of course, but she won't have anything to do after she gets there save to attend to her patient. I'll stake my professional reputation on that."

"That's a whopping big wager to put up on bed-making," Lillian gibed.

"What have you to do, Madge, in the next few minutes?" she asked.

"Nothing," I replied. "Phil will arrive within the hour, he says, but that doesn't entail any work for me, except seeing that my room is ready for him after Edith leaves it, and telling Katie that he and Otto will be here for dinner and for subsequent meals."

"That won't faze Katie much," Lillian commented. "She's worked so long for the Graham family that she has an elastic schedule, capable of being stretched at an instant's notice. She never knows whether she's going to have six or 16 for dinner, but she takes everything in her stride, and she'll tuck Phil and Otto into her preparations without fuss."

"The only thing that throws Katie off balance," Katherine commented, "is Mother Graham, and that darling martinet is so busy in the nursery that she hasn't a second over to bedevil Katie. If she were to appear, we'd have to hog-tie her before she reached the kitchen. Katie must be overwhelmed with work."

"She is," I said worriedly.

"She won't be today," Lillian said confidently. "I already have assured her that I, a notable wrestler of pots and pans, am going to give her a hand with the dishes, and with any other duties where needed. Suppose I dash down and tell her about old Phil now, and then come back here to see what's doing?"

"A most excellent idea," Katherine answered, and Lillian was out of the room before she had fairly finished.

"Is there any reason why we can't transfer Ede downstairs right away?" she asked.

"Not one," I answered.

"Good!" she commented. "Then you'd have a chance before Phil arrives to get out of your room anything you think might be in the great impresario's way."

There was something in her voice which brought a dry chuckle from Lillian.

"One thing is certain, Madge," she said. "Katrina isn't eating her heart out because old Phil is carrying a torch for Olga. I hope you appreciate my time worn cliches."

"The Authority on Authorities"

SUIT SLAMS SAFEST

In match point duplicate, it is pretty hard sometimes to blame ambitious slam bidders for seeking top scores by bidding them in No Trump rather than in a suit. But when the game is rubber bridge, there is no justification for jeopardizing the big game and slam premiums by trying for the few extra points from No Trump unless the slam seems equally safe in that declaration. Usually there is added surety in the best suit because you can protect your short suits by ruffs, besides picking up occasional extra tricks that way.

West's lead of the club Q rendered South helpless. He could not even puzzle out a squeeze play, due to lack of late-round communication between the dummy and his own hand, so he could get only eleven tricks—seven in diamonds, three in spades and one in clubs. When he then lost a heart to the A, East set him with the club K.

Probably the safest bid for South, after North's 5-Diamond response to the Blackwood 4-No Trumps showed one ace, was 6-Diamonds. That would have made the third time he bid the suit, telling North what it was like. If North had not enough cards to fit a suit at least six cards long, he could have shifted the slam to his own higher ranking suit of spades, to to No Trumps if he had the club king.

As it was, the diamond slam would have been passed by North, and could have been made, after a club lead to the A, by taking the spade Q, diamond A and K, spade A and K for two club discards, losing a heart at the end.

COUNCIL ELECTS TO FIRE, POLICE PENSION BOARDS

Croak, Porch Named to Police Group. Emmons, Kyle to Serve for Firemen.

City council last night elected two of its members to each the police and fire pension boards but not until after a second ballot had been cast in a contest for representation on the firemen's pension board.

Arthur L. Croak and Russell D. Porch were re-elected to serve on the police pension board and Harry Emmons and George C. Kyle were named again to the firemen's pension board.

Emmons was re-elected on the first ballot for the office but Kyle won out over Lester Hunter and C. N. Shultz only after a second vote had been taken, having tied with Hunter with four votes on the first count.

On the final tally, Kyle gathered four of council's votes, Hunter three and Shultz two. The first ballot count had been Kyle and Hunter four each and Shultz three.

Council representatives will meet with members of each of the departments the last week of this month for re-organization of the respective boards at which time two citizens will be elected to fill out the six-man committees.

Firemen Monday re-elected Capt. Frank R. Stahl and Firemen C. O. Hall to represent them and police re-named Capt. John Miller and Lieut. Bruce Friday to their board.

Citizens members of the board, either to be replaced or re-elected at the re-organization meeting are Roy A. Ish, 31 Fair street, and E. K. Troll, 91 Stewart avenue, on the police board, and D. L. Burns, 240 Rae avenue, and Charles Beelman, 365 Davis road, on the firemen's pension board.

Tourists Find Niagara Falls Still Puzzling

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—(U.P.)—What the average American tourist doesn't know about Niagara Falls causes frequent pained expressions on the faces of the young women at the information desk of the Chamber of Commerce here.

For at least 10 times a day someone wants to know "What time do they turn off the Falls?" And they're not kidding about it either.

Then there was the honeymoon couple who wanted to know if they could rent cabins with cooking privileges on the brink of the Falls. Then there was the young bride-to-be who wanted to spend her honeymoon in a tree house.

Many tourists write to ask if it possible to see the Falls without going to Canada, and if they go in can they return to the United States without a passport. Still others want to know if it is possible to cross on the foot bridge to Goat Island without paying toll. The answers are "Yes."

The daily average of written inquiries exceeds 100, and they come from all over the world. Perhaps the classic is the inquiry of the English woman who wondered if they would still be frozen in July.

MANSFIELD AMONG 22 CITIES BOOSTING BUILDING VALUATION

Mansfield helped to boost Ohio building to the highest volume and valuation levels in 10 years, C. J. Ryan, vice president of Investors Syndicate reported today.

Mansfield was one of the 22 cities in the state used in a housing survey, the combined volume in 1939 showing a gain for the first time in 10 years, Ryan said.

"These 22 cities," Ryan explained in commenting on the company's new national housing survey, "provided new homes in 1939 for 39,460 people, a rise of 21,540, or 120.9 per cent, over 1938, when new homes were built for 17,920 persons."

"In point of new home construction during 1939 these cities ranked sixth in a list of 41 states and the District of Columbia; their volume position for the nine year—year total was fifth," he added.

Value of new residences built in these 22 cities in 1939 totaled $43,301,442, a rise of $22,039,805, or 104 per cent over the 1938 level of $21,231,637, the survey showed.

Cities used in the survey besides Mansfield included Akron, Ashtabula, Canton, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, East Cleveland, Hamilton, Lakewood, Lima, Lorain, Marion, Newark, Portsmouth, Springfield, Steubenville, Toledo, Warren, Youngstown and Zanesville.

RELIEF NEEDS MORE KNITTERS

Allied Fund Group Pleads For More Woolen Sox For Soldiers.

BEVERLY FARMS, Mass.—(INS)—Wanted—more women to tend to their knitting.

It's all in a good cause. The appeal is made by an Allied Relief Fund group of volunteers who are knitting sox for English soldiers.

Pressing need right now is for women to operate small knitting machines to make standard sox. They can also use women who can hand knit at home, the 28-inch sea stockings and sweaters required by British soldiers.

The group is receiving contributions for materials. Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, of Chicago and Manchester, wife of the former American Minister to Sweden, donated $500.

Sumner Pingree, of Hamilton, donated 1100 pounds of wool clip from his prize Dorset flock of sheep. Another crop of wool was donated from the flock of Amory Coolidge of Magnolia.

Capacity output of the group of women knitters is 125 pairs of sox and 15 sweaters a week. But with more volunteers, they could double the output.

The women also are proud of the speed with which their goods are getting to the British. Five weeks after being made, the sox and sweaters are being worn by English soldiers and sailors. So far as is known, none has been held up by red tape, none lost by ship sinkings.

The largest tuna caught on rod and reel weighed 890 pounds.

Experts Call Davey's Sales Tax Repeal Unfeasible

DECLARE NO SUBSTITUTE LEVY WORKS

Charge Proposal Written Into Party Platform as 'Vote Catcher.'

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — Two of Ohio's best informed taxation authorities agreed today that Martin L. Davey's proposal to repeal the retail sales tax is unfeasible at this time.

Hugh Jenkins, chairman of the state tax appeals board, and George Sheridan, director of the Ohio Council of Retail Merchants, declared that there is no satisfactory substitute tax, or group of substitutes, to replace the $50,000,000 a year the state would lose by repeal of the 3 per cent levy on sales.

Both of these authorities on taxation viewed the Davey repeal proposal, written into the Democratic state platform at his behest, as a "vote-catcher." Each doubted that the Democratic gubernatorial nominee would press for repeal after making a more thorough study of taxation.

Ohio's sales tax became effective in January, 1935. The legislature enacted it primarily to replace revenue lost through adoption of the 10-mill real estate tax limitation, and to furnish funds for new burdens of the state, old age pensions and relief as well as for public schools and local governments.

Davey said that the sales tax should be repealed because it is "obnoxious, lays a heavy burden on the poor, is expensive to collect, and its yield is shrinking." He offered no substitute revenue measures, but, if elected, promises to appoint a commission of tax experts to seek suitable substitutes.

Conceding the popularity of the repeal proposal with the voters, its opponents warned that abolition of the sales tax at this time would wreak havoc upon the public schools, local governments, old age pensions, relief and other vital government functions.

They took the attitude that while the sales tax may have its undesirable features, it is better for Ohio to retain it until some better taxation method is devised.

Refusing to speculate on whether the sales tax is here to stay, Chairman Jenkins of the tax appeals board said:

"Repeal is not feasible now. Under the present set-up, there is no satisfactory tax or group of them which would yield enough revenue to replace the $50,000,000 that would be lost."

Sheridan defended the operation of the sales levy and asserted that none of the alternative taxes would be very productive.

"If the sales tax were abandoned," said the head of the retail merchants' council, "we would have to impose about every known tax. There are some 20 of them, including levies on net income, luxuries, personal services and newspaper advertising."

Answering Davey's charge that other states with sales taxes get a much higher yield, Sheridan explained that this was due to their broader tax base. California, Illinois and Michigan, he said, apply the levy to liquor, gasoline, food and "everything else," while Ohio exempts those articles.

Up and Down THE STREET

All during their bowling season members of the Mansfield Rug and Linoleum bowling team watched their treasury balance growing and when the Cleveland Indians stepped into the lead of the pennant race there was no doubt about how that balance was to be spent. So yesterday afternoon the five men headed for Cleveland. At ten minutes to three in the afternoon they were just piling into a taxi to go to the stadium when the game was called because of rain. Thereafter, of course, it didn't rain any more. But you can't discourage a good kegler. The men settled for a show and dinner and anticipation of another treasury balance.

There were high spirits in the vicinity of Fredericktown today as friends of former U. S. Senator C. C. Dill scrutinized early returns in the Washington state Democratic primary. For Dill was born near Fredericktown and the returns showed him leading his opponent, Governor Clarence D. Martin, in the race for the gubernatorial nomination. The lead looked like a comfortable one, too. Early precincts gave Dill a 16,000 margin.

One thing you can say for P. M. Wooden is that when his wife tells him to do something he sure follows orders. Yesterday Wooden came into Richland County Auto club ladened down with bills of sales and other records and told officials that he would like to get his license plates. After one of the girls in the office had filled out his application, it dawned on her that Wooden had asked for license plates and not a driver's license. She pointed out to Wooden that this was the time to get a driver's license and that he had already bought plates. Wooden reddened and said: "Doggone it, my wife told me it was license plates I was to get today."

Traffic on the two streets was blocked during a part of the afternoon while the house, one of several which must be moved or razed to make room for the new Westinghouse addition, was moved from East Fourth street to Central avenue. Most of the houses east of the Westinghouse office building have been razed in preparation for the building project.

ROBBER SOUGHT BY POLICE FOR YOUTH'S DEATH

(By United Press)

CINCINNATI—The automobile of slain Robert T. Myers, 22, whose body was found lying in front of the Union terminal, was sought today as a key clue in the search for the killer of the young metallurgist.

Police believe Myers was shot through the heart by a man who robbed him and then sped away in his car. License number of the car was broadcast throughout Ohio and neighboring states.

Myers' still warm body was discovered by a passerby last night as it lay on the northeast side of the circular driveway in front of the big Union station.

Thomas C. Myers, father of the slain man, said his son left home to attend a meeting of foundrymen in a terminal restaurant last night.

Coroner Frank M. Coppock said Myers was shot to death at close range after apparently putting up stiff resistance to his assailant. He was formerly a star football center at the University of Cincinnati.

Fifty cents in change was found in one of his pockets but his wallet was missing. Police, arriving at call of the passerby, found blood coming from the slain man's face. At first they thought he had been slugged. The bullet wound was discovered after the body was taken to the morgue.

Police believed a bandit or bandits pressed a gun against Myers when he got out of his car to attend the foundry meeting. He resisted and they killed him, police theorized, and then the bandits took his wallet and his car.

The possibility that Myers might have been shot elsewhere and the body dumped on the terminal plaza was doubted.

He was shot with a .25 calibre automatic pistol.

OHIO ANGLE

Cleveland Labor Racketeers Mentioned in Trial.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The names of Don A. Campbell and John E. McGee, Cleveland labor racketeers now serving terms in Ohio penitentiary, were introduced in testimony here at the George Scalise trial.

Appealing as a defense witness, Dillard G. Bowles of Cleveland, Ohio organizer for the Building Service Employes International Union (AFL) testified that he succeeded McGee of the McGee-Campbell "mob" as Ohio organizer in 1936.

The prosecution has charged that Scalise, former president of the union accused of stealing $60,087 in union funds, was boosted to the presidency by labor racketeers in Chicago.

Campbell and McGee, serving one to five-year terms, were convicted of extorting $1,200 from Restaurateur Vernon Stouffer before allowing work to be completed on remodeling a restaurant.

Rams Tackle Favored Wooster High Team

Madison high school's fighting Rams this week launch their 1940 football season when they invade Wooster for a night game at 8 p. m. Saturday.

* * *

The Rams' opponent for the initial tilt will be a highly favored Wooster high school eleven.

* * *

In meeting Wooster, a Class A school, in the opening contest, the hilltop grid machine launches a schedule of nine games, one of the toughest schedules a Madison team has ever had to face.

Coach Al Fendrick faces this schedule with a squad of 42, one of the school's largest since 1934, but of this number only seven are veterans.

In spite of their tough first encounter, the Rams will be out to try to begin where the left off last fall when they closed their 1939 season by giving the undefeated Bellville high school eleven its only setback of the season.

Fendrick's freshman crop have proved to be the bright spot during practice sessions, and from this group he will select those to fill vacancies created by graduation last June.

* * *

He will have to choose his reserve strength from these unseasoned freshmen and sophomores.

Veterans around whom the 1940 Ram grid machine will be built include Bob Heichel, Bill Folmer, Bob Fletcher, Russell Price and John Chuhaloff, linemen, and Harold Hammer and Walt Weimer, backs.

BOWLING SCORES

The Mansfield Tire and Rubber company and Transportation bowling leagues opened their season at the Meder Recreation alleys last night without any sensational scores.

Bill Hetler set the individual pace in the Transportation loop with a 559, while Schmidt ran off with honors in the Mansfield Tire circuit by virtue of a 553 total.

Akron Has Experienced Men Available to Meet Tyger Team Friday.

By CHARLES MARTIN
News-Journal Sports Editor.

MANSFIELD high's Tygers will face a veteran lineup when Akron West invades Stadium field at 8 p. m. Friday under the arcs in the opening football contest for both teams.

* * *

Coach Bill Scheidt, who replaced Russ Beichley as head mentor, has nine lettermen available for duty and most of them will see service against the Tygers.

* * *

What they will do under pressure remains to be seen, but the Cowboys may give the Mansfield combine a real battle.

Leading the Akron team are Rudy Crews, lanky end, Don Combs, flashy halfback, and George Sarkis, hard-hitting fullback. Crews is an excellent pass receiver, with Combs on the throwing end.

Scheidt today is not sure of his starting lineup, but indicated he will toss his full strength against Coach Paul Snyder's machine. Last season the team was weak, but the Cowboy pilot believes his proteges may develop into a winning combination.

Meanwhile, Snyder is cutting down his squad of 80 candidates today and concentrating on his backfield. From all indications he will start Elroy "Lightning" Jones and Bill Doolittle at the halfback posts, with Bob Lantz holding down the quarterback position and Martin Henke taking care of the fullback duties.

Snyder is doubtful about the forward wall and stated today that he would not have the starting line set until Thursday. Four youths are fighting it out for a tackle and guard post.

* * *

The Mansfield coach sent his athletes through a stiff scrimmage today and will hold a signal practice Thursday.

* * *

Mansfield Senior high officials are planning to accommodate a record turnout Friday. A program dedicating the new lighting system installed this summer will be held between halves.

These Lads Will Carry Mail Friday

Here's the first-string backfield Coach Paul Snyder will employ when the Mansfield high Tygers tackle Akron West at 8 p. m. Friday at Stadium field. Slated for starting berths are Elroy "Lightning" Jones, halfback; Bob Lantz, quarterback; Martin Henke, fullback and Bill Doolittle, halfback. While Snyder will send them in at the opening whistle they may not play for he has several outstanding juniors who are expected to see service. Among them are Jim Templeton, halfback, and Adam Brandt, fullback. Junior high students may purchase their tickets for the game at their respective junior high or at Brown's or Central drug stores. Students tickets are 15 cents.

Introduce New Sport To Fans

Marine Corps League to Hold Tug-of-War Tourney.

The tourney, sponsored by the Marine Corps league, will be staged at the Mansfield Coliseum Oct. 7, 8, 11 and 12, it was announced today by Jack Hubert, who is in charge of the meet.

* * *

The pulling will be conducted from a specially constructed platform and 12 matches will be held each night. Teams are to consist of seven men not weighing over 1,300 pounds. Each team may have substitutes to replace them every three mintues.

Rules and entry blanks can be secured from contacting Hubert at Canal 4125.

Four Moundsmen Unable to Stop Pandas in First Playoff Contest.

ONE of the things the Mansfield Braves thought they had cleared up popped up again last night in Lima where they bowed to the Pandas in the opening game of the Ohio State league Shaughnessy playoff.

* * *

The pitching weakness with which the tribe was troubled during the regular season, and which was somewhat cleared up toward the end of the season, returned again last night as four Mansfield pitchers paraded to the hill as the Braves lost to Lima 7 to 4.

* * *

Manager Dewey Stover was expected to send Bob Arnold against the Pandas in the second game of the playoff series at 8 p. m. today at the Fairground.

In the other Shaughnessy playoff last night Findlay knocked off Tiffin 7 to 2 in chilly weather which held attendance down to 150.

The Braves took a 3-1 lead in the first inning when Woodling knocked out a homerun with two men on bases, but the Pandas tied this up by putting across one run in each of the first three frames.

Lima took a 5-3 lead in the fourth frame when Crum, second baseman, hit out a homerun, with one mate on base. The Braves tallied another run in the fifth and Lima added their final two in the sixth.

The Braves' four moundsmen, Laurilla, Snider, Byers and Patterson, only gave up six hits, but did their most damage by issuing 11 bases on balls.

* * *

Adding to the injury three Lima players were hit by balls pitched by Byers and all in the same inning.

* * *

The three hurlers struck out a total of 12 batters, the same number as Biscan the Lima hurler who won his 27th game of the season against four losses.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY M'LEMORE.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The United States Golf association met behind closed doors not so long ago and, with closed minds, barred Jim Ferrier of Australia from playing in the national amateur championship now in progress a few miles up the road from here.

* * *

When word of the ban first came out there was much speculation as to the cause of it. Every one agreed that Jim must have done something pretty terrible, such as shooting clay pigeons on the ground, or robbing a bird's nest, or teeing up his ball in a water hazard.

* * *

But everyone was wrong. He had done something much worse than any of these things—Jim—and the U. S. G. A. blushed right down to the roots of its last rule and regulation at having to announce it—Jim, it said, had written a book.

He said, yes, he was the author of "Im Ferrier's Golf Shots," published in Australia. He denied that it was a book of golf instruction which would make him a professional, but simply a telling of how he made his unorthodox shots.

Ferrier would be the favorite to win the title if he had been allowed to play at Winged Foot this week. Why did the U. S. G. A. wait so long to tell him he couldn't play in our amateur championship?

The Australian has been in this country some five months, and officials must have known about his book. And Ferrier's whereabouts could not have been a mystery, because he has been playing—and as an accepted amateur—at some of the best clubs under the guidance of the U. S. G. A.

It couldn't be, could it, that the men who run golf haven't heard of the U. S. Postal Service, or of that new fangled device called the telegraph? On second thought, perhaps, that's the answer.

There is the very good chance that the U. S. G. A. is still living in its little world of long ago, where the gutta ball, the baffy, and the tam o'shanter were part of golf.

I still think that Ferrier is the best amateur in the U. S. today.

Birds Continue Winning Ways

Columbus Climbs Within 3½ Games of Lead.

(By Associated Press)

This was the year that the Kansas City Blues were planning to build up a safe lead in the American association so they could rest up for the Shaughnessy playoffs.

* * *

Their poor showing in the playoffs a year ago was attributed to the fact the flag race was so close that the Blues were worn out. But Columbus had other ideas this season. . . . A red-hot finish moved the Red Birds into a contending position and there they have stayed.

* * *

The Blues lost again last night 7 to 3, to St. Paul, while Columbus was clipping Indianapolis, 10 to 2. Now the Birds are three and a half games back of the Blues.

Both teams have six games to play, leaving Columbus a slim chance.

Art Herring held Kansas City to eight scattered hits as the Saints took an easy decision from the leaders. Tom Sunkel was equally effective against the Indians, giving up seven hits.

* * *

Minneapolis and Milwaukee split. The Millers took the opener, 6 to 5, as Elon Hogsett hung up his 16th victory.

* * *

The Brewers built up an 8-3 lead in the nightcap and outlasted the Millers' four-run rally in the last inning for an 8-7 victory. Toledo and Louisville were not scheduled.

From Kansas City the Yankees drew shortstop Phil Rizzuto, second-baseman Jerry Priddy, and pitchers John Lindell and Don Hendrickson, both right-handers.

Tribe Slides Into Lead

Bonham, Feller to Tangle on Mound Today as Yankees Tackle Cleveland Club.

By RAY BLOSSER

CLEVELAND—(AP)—Oscar Vitt's Indians slid back into first place through the strategy of not playing the New York Yankees, but only another SOS to the weatherman will get them out of an unwelcome double date with the Bombers today.

"We think we're going to town," was the keynote sounded by Joe McCarthy, the Yankee manager. "We have begun to get the breaks and the pitching has improved."

* * *

McCarthy nominated Ernie Bonham, the 27-year-old Californian who was pulled in from Kansas City for the stretch drive, and old Charlie Ruffing for mound duty in the series which begins and ends the same day.

* * *

Standing between the Yankees and the two victories they wanted were Bob Feller, seeking to nail down his 25th triumph, and Lefty Al Smith, with 13 triumphs.

Detroit's 13-inning defeat by Boston yesterday gave the Indians the barest of percentage leads over the Tigers; placed the Yanks a half-game behind, and left the still-threatening Red Sox four to the rear.

The Indians and Yankees got in uniform for the game scheduled yesterday, but showers fell and the Cleveland club called off hostilities. Thus was created today's bargain bill.

Vitt exuded a slight amount of optimism, saying:

Vitt calculated Cleveland had obtained another break by the postponement. It gave Weatherly's injured leg another day of rest and will make possible his return to center field today. Hal Trosky is still away from first base with a bad leg, and Outfielder Beau Bell was expected to fill in.

Top Stars May Pitch

Walters, Derringer Expected To Face Boston In Doubleheader.

BOSTON—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds, who are counting the days until they can write their names under the 1940 National League pennant, gathered strength today for a double header with Boston and a final victory march which they hope will carry them under the wire within a week.

* * *

With a seven-game lead and most of the cards stacked in their favor, the Reds had Bucky Walters, gunning for his 19th triumph of the season, down to meet the seventh-place Bees in one of the encounters.

* * *

Manager Bill McKechnie indicated he might switch from Johnny Vander Meer, scheduled to hurl the other game, to Paul Derringer, the Reds' No. 2 hurler.

The rain which caused postponement of a double header in Boston yesterday went hand-in-hand with McKechnie's pitching plans by making it possible for Walters and Derringer to face the Bees today and be ready to meet the Dodgers in a twin bill Sunday, without overwork. One game with Boston has been cancelled as a result of the postponement.

* * *

With the exception of the Cardinals, the Bees are the only club that stands a chance of grabbing the long end of the season's encounters with Cincinnati.

* * *

Out to down the Rhinelanders, Manager Casey Stengel of the Bees has Sailor Bill Posedel and Manuel Salvo or Nick Stincevich ready on tap for mound duty.
